Loophole Lets Liquor License Grow In Value

By NANCY HICKS and GORDON WINTERS
Star Staff Writers

Liquor licenses are a rare commodity in Lincoln. The city fathers made them rare when the City Council limited the number of private liquor licenses in the city to 135. Like other rare commodities, liquor licenses are expensive — some say too expensive, with figures of $20,000 and higher said to be the selling price.

It is illegal to sell a liquor license.

Beer Truck-Sized Loophole

But the law has a loophole big enough to drive a beer truck through. And people have done just that for years.

The loophole exists in the "blue-sky" price (price of fixtures, goodwill or reputation) of a liquor establishment and is reinforced by the simultaneous surrender of licenses.

Here's how it works.

Someone who wants to sell booze in Lincoln first finds a business with a liquor license and agrees to buy the business. The City Council recommends to the State Liquor Commission approval of the new license based on location and type of structure and the character of the buyer.

The seller then surrenders his liquor license at the same time a license is issued to the new buyer, thus assuring that Lincoln never goes above the 135 limit.

The price of the license itself is hidden in the price of the business.

$15,000 Years Back

For example, several years ago a Lincoln businessman wanted a liquor license. For $15,000 he bought a rundown, midtown business — never intending to use the name of the business, the location or the fixtures. Essentially what this man got for his $15,000 was a liquor license.

"You can sell your fixtures. You can sell your goodwill. But you can't sell your license," said City Atty. Charles Humble.

"There's no law that says you can't be foolish and pay more than the fixtures are worth," said a man who paid about $8,500 for fixtures he didn't want when he opened a tavern about five years ago.

This practice, however, has been known for years. So far there has been no hue and cry for change.

The sale of liquor licenses does periodically become controversial in Lincoln.

But the reason for the controversy is not that licenses are being bought or sold, rather it is that the price is getting too high.

Supply and demand definitely are factors in determining the price of a license, attorneys and business owners say.

Currently $20,000 to $25,000

Prices have ranged from $2,500 to more than $30,000. The current average is $20,000 to $25,000, according to police, who investigate every transaction for the council.

The numbers game not only creates a market for licenses, but also increases the value of the business itself by making it more likely it will succeed, since competition is limited.

Council members have always realized that by limiting licenses, they are in effect limiting competition.

But past councils have been swayed by this argument:

If no limit is placed on the number of licenses, Lincoln will have a tavern on every corner, creating chaos and breeding law enforcement problems.

When the city has more taverns than the public will financially support, the argument goes, marginal operators will sell to minors, operate after hours or turn to bookmaking and prostitution to keep their businesses afloat.

The city's limit on the number of liquor licenses, can be overruled by the State Liquor Control Commission, the body with the actual authority to deny or approve liquor licenses.

Local Limits Upheld

But the state body traditionally upholds number limits approved by cities. Most of the cities in the state have some sort of number limit.

In effect, the limit of 135 has existed since 1968. The City Council, did, in 1972, make a paper increase of two from 133 licenses by abolishing a separate category for hotels and motels with seating for more than 100 and placing those two licenses with the others.

In addition to the 135 licenses, a separate category exists for the three liquor licenses on government property.

The present City Council has periodically toyed with the idea of raising the limit; various ideas have been advanced on how many licenses should be added.

The issue is about to reappear. On April 7 City Atty. Humble will tell the council about options used by other cities.

They include proposals to tie the limit on licenses to population. The argument in favor of this type of proposal is that it will automatically provide a safety valve for pressures that might lead to high prices for liquor licenses.

Lincoln Has Grown

When the limit was established in 1968 the population of the city was about 146,000. It is now around 172,000.

This means that in 1968 each of 135 licenses existed for about every 1,085 inhabitants. In 1975 the ratio is about one to every 1,274. Arguments over this proposal will probably revolve over the proper ratio.

A variation of this proposal is to establish different limits for different types of licenses. For example, different limits could be set for taverns, for hotels, restaurants and motels, for package liquor stores and for clubs.

Another proposal might be simply to increase the number of licenses to permit a few more licensees because of recent pressure.

Any proposal that the limit be dropped altogether is apparently not politically realistic, in the eyes of many observers.

Each time the council has tried to raise the 135 limit there has been an orchestrated wail from the liquor beverage businesses:

"There is an abundance of licenses now. Lincoln has more licenses than other cities its size. There are marginal businesses willing to sell out."

They have another reason for opposing an increase.

More than one license holder privately admitted, "We paid for our license. I think everyone should. Why should someone else get one free?"

Demoralized Troops Have Little Fight Left

SAIGON, South Vietnam (AP) — Da Nang, South Vietnam's second largest city, and other northern coastal strongholds crumbled Sunday before a powerful North Vietnamese offensive that rolled south toward Qui Nhon, leaving in its wake destruction, panic and an estimated two million refugees.

Demoralized government forces offered little resistance as the North Vietnamese plunged 175 miles from Da Nang to Qui Nhon, where fighting was reported. U.S. officials said all Americans had been evacuated from Qui Nhon, a port that is South Vietnam's third largest city with more than 200,000 people. Like Da Nang, it was once a major U.S. base.

U.S. military sources said the evacuation by sea of refugees from Da Nang had halted because the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong were firing on the rescue ships.

North Vietnamese broadcasts condemned the evacuation as a "brazen provocation" and demanded that all American ships stay away from South Vietnam.

Opposition politicians in Saigon blamed President Nguyen Van Thieu for the military rout and issued new calls for his resignation. Some politicians predicted Saigon itself will fall if he stays in power.

South Vietnamese forces gave up tens of millions of dollars worth of U.S.-supplied weapons, vehicles and other equipment in the areas lost to the Communists. Military sources said no attempt would be made to retrieve the war materiel.

The North Vietnamese Foreign Ministry said in a broadcast statement that President Ford's order to send four Navy ships to evacuate people in Da Nang "proves clearly that the U.S. government still very stubbornly refuses to end its military involvement and interference in the internal affairs of South Vietnam."

The Navy ships are to join U.S. cargo vessels already evacuating people. Britain, Australia and several other U.S. allies also promised ships.

White House Press Secretary Ron Nessen said in Palm Springs, Calif., the President has directed the American ships to "avoid hostilities" and withdraw if fired upon. He said the ships would be far enough offshore that "it is not likely they would come under fire."

Hanoi claimed the United States was using a humanitarian pretext to try to save government troops along the coast and bolster the morale of the South Vietnamese government and military.

Despite flat reports by Saigon military officials that Da Nang had fallen, Defense Department officials in Washington said Sunday they still had no confirmation the city was lost, and their latest information was that fighting was still going on there. The United States no longer has any official representatives or observers in Da Nang.

Hanoi radio and many South Vietnamese troops and civil servants crossed over to the antigovernment side during the fall of Da Nang and that people poured into the streets to welcome the Viet Cong.

It said many government officers "mutinied, punished their die-hard commanders and came over to the revolution with weapons." Other Saigon troops were "seized with panic" and subsequently wiped out or taken prisoner, Hanoi said.

At least two American cargo ships made their way into the harbor to evacuate refugees.

Associated Press correspondent Peter O'Loughlin reported from the S.S. Pioneer Contender that 10,000 soldiers, women and children were storming the gangways of the Contender and the Pioneer Commander.

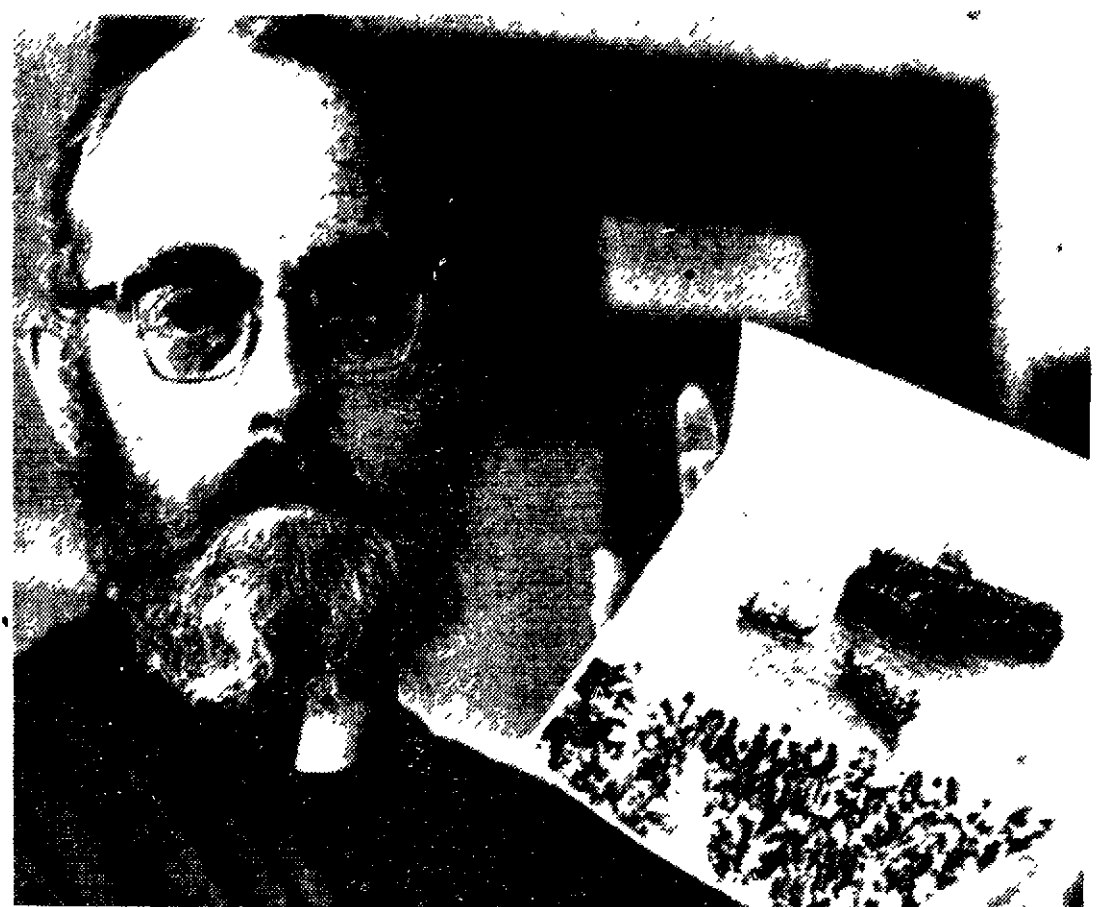

O'Loughlin said they had spent four days on ammunition barges without food and water. He reported the birth of one baby in the panic, the death of another, with still more likely to die.

He said there were sunken patrol boats in the harbor and that the ships had been warned of a possible underwater sapper attack.

Cambodian President Lon Nol was scheduled to leave Phnom Penh Monday afternoon to fly to Thailand and Indonesia, Thai Prime Minister Kukrit Pramoj said in Bangkok. It was reported that Lon Nol would later fly to Hawaii to for medical treatment.

Cambodian rebels overran a government position only six miles from Phnom Penh and intensified their drive against the capital's northern defense line, field reports said. Insurgent gunners shelled the airport and nearby market, wounding eight persons, but the U.S. airlift of food, fuel and ammunition continued.

The North Vietnamese now control virtually all of the upper half of South Vietnam, freeing some of their 10 divisions in the region to push even further south toward Tuy Hoa, Nha Trang and Cam Ranh Bay, where the sealift is carrying refugees from Da Nang.

NEW YORK PRIEST... Father John Mergenhagen rescued.

Americans Make Escape From Da Nang Before Fall

SAIGON, South Vietnam (AP) — "It was a typical American scene — making the best of the situation. The black humor, keeping it light, trying to keep calm while everyone had a sense of something really dangerous around us."

This is how the Rev. John J. Mergenhagen, a Roman Catholic priest from Buffalo, N.Y., who managed the Catholic Relief Services office in Da Nang, described the long night of waiting to be evacuated from the northern port city along with 40 other Americans.

Da Nang fell to Communist-led forces early Sunday, military officials said, trapping more than one million refugees and 100,000 of Saigon's best soldiers inside.

Safe in Saigon, the bearded priest looked back on his last three weeks in Da Nang. Calm grew into tension and finally panic as thousands of soldiers and civilians poured into the city from the provinces toppling around Da Nang.

"I can't feel any elation sitting here," the priest said. "I left too many friends behind. Before I was worried about getting out. Now I'm worried about them."

The priest told how clusters of Vietnamese, many of them present or former employees of the Americans, gathered around as one plan for evacuation after another was discussed, knowing that where the priest and his compatriots were going there might be room for them as well.

Finally, however, the Americans threw the Vietnamese off their trail and rushed to a waiting freighter — and escape.

The order to evacuate came on Thursday to the Americans still in Da Nang — "people who didn't get the word on earlier evacuations and those working for voluntary agencies, helping in hospitals and refugee camps up until the last moment.

They gathered at an old U.S. compound in the early evening. At dawn, the Americans were told to break up into small groups, to throw off the clustering Vietnamese, and make their way to a rendezvous point.

There, they boarded speedboats and were rushed to a freighter in the harbor, the S.S. Pioneer Contender, one of several ships being used for evacuation of refugees.

It took another 10 hours, the priest said, to load 5,600 refugees. He said healthy soldiers crawled over women and children to scamper up the gangway. Several refugees fell off barges and drowned, only one saved by floating in an inner tube. Americans fired pistols to chase away refugees in sampans trying to circumvent the barges.

Nebraska TB Cases Lowest

Nebraska had the lowest number of tuberculosis cases in the country in 1974.

The State Health Department's disease control division reported there were 41 active cases of TB in Nebraska in 1974. The U.S. Center for Communicable Diseases is expected to confirm shortly that Nebraska was the lowest in the country.

Roger Murray, TB coordinator, noted that the state's TB rate has been falling for some time. In 1961, doctors reported 159 active TB sufferers, and in 1946, prior to the introduction of drugs for the control of TB, there were 322 cases.

Dr. Paul Stoesz, director of disease control, attributed Nebraska's low rate to the absence of crowded conditions, the generally good socioeconomic conditions and a program which "makes it all but impossible to ignore the disease."

Dr. Stoesz noted the state's TB programs pays for treatment of TB sufferers who cannot afford to pay themselves.

The possibility that there are TB carriers going unnoticed is low, he said.

Although disease reporting generally is poor, he said when such benefits as free treatment are provided, the quality of reporting improves markedly.

"Money talks," he said.

Eventually, Dr. Stoesz said, he believes TB will be wiped out in Nebraska, but he predicted it will be a long time coming.

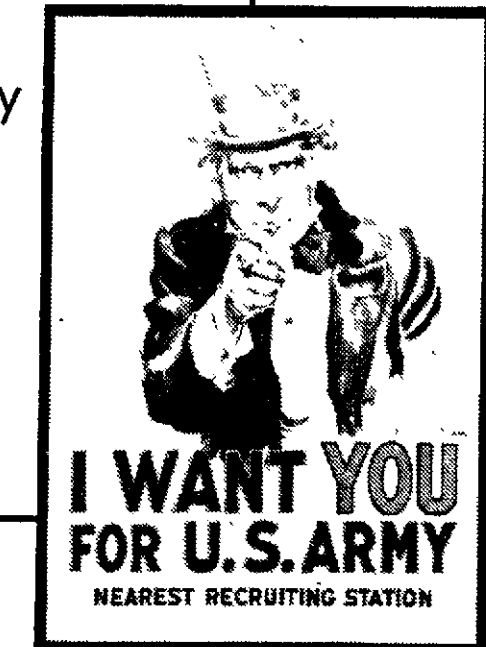

Disease control also improved on other fronts during 1974. Dr. Stoesz said Nebraska was one of the few states reporting a decrease in gonorrhea cases in 1974. He said 4,207 cases were recorded in 1974, compared to 5,717 in 1973.

The incidence of syphilis also dropped in 1974. Ten cases were recorded; 16 cases occurred in 1973.

School Advocates Choosing Up Sides

By DICK HOLMAN

Star Staff Writer

Marilyn Fowler's campaign to reduce the number of school districts in Nebraska is generating a response that has traditionally sidetracked reorganization: polarization.

The State Board of Education member is seeking support to eliminate three-fourths of the districts, and the expected opposition is chugging into battle positions.

But her efforts could result in more than just another rerun. Education spokesmen indicate Mrs. Fowler, of Lexington, is spurring momentum that could ready the consolidation issue for the Legislature in 1976.

But tangents spring from the central desire for quality education. Traditional diversions that could derail Mrs. Fowler's steamer:

- Taxation and school finance.
- Local control vs. state control.
- Effect and enforcement of education laws and standards.
- Condition of school buildings.
- Quality of instructional materials.

Basically Same Fight

Gov. J. James Exon said while he shares Mrs. Fowler's concern "regarding the quality of all schools," her suggestion that all the small Class I schools merge with their choice of K12 districts by 1978 is "basically the old fight of school district reorganization in Nebraska."

Exon said, "The State Department of Education and the State Board of Education have enough problems on their hands today with implementation of LB403 (special education), without 'looking to start some other education war.'"

To Mrs. Fowler's suggestion that the LB403 administrative nightmare has resulted in part from processing paperwork from 1,241 districts — more than in any state in the nation — the governor replied:

"From my knowledge of the way the State Department of Education has thus far mishandled 403, it's not because of the number of school districts."

U.S. Education Commissioner Ted Bell presents another view: "Some states have more than 1,000 school districts. Many are permitting small, inefficient school districts to operate in close proximity to other small, inefficient school districts. This needs legislative attention."

State Has 7% Of Total

Nebraska State Education Association (NSEA) Executive Director Paul Belz of Lincoln pointed out: "We have in this state 7% of the school districts of the nation. We have fewer than 1% of the students enrolled. There is a disparity there that cannot be justified under any stretch of the imagination."

Belz said the NSEA, representing teachers, has had a "long-standing position" to reorganize Nebraska into K12 districts, and the NSEA Delegate Assembly may address the issue in April.

Exon opposes mandatory school district reorganization. He admits "there are too many school districts in the state, but I have always felt strongly about local control of schools, so long as those schools provide the level of education that is necessary and required by state law."

Mrs. Fowler has charged that some small rural districts operate inefficiently and show disinterest in or flagrant disregard for minimum educational standards.

Small Not All Bad

Exon said, "I'm sure there are some that would be substandard." However, "I just don't buy that concept that because you have a small school, that's a bad school. In many instances, I think the reverse is true."

Exon said that if there are 923 nonaccredited or nonapproved districts — as Mrs. Fowler has said — "we should take a look at our rules and regulations, to make sure they are realistic." He added, "Sometimes standards are written that aren't reasonable."

State board member Frank Landis of Lincoln said, "I would think that it's a matter the Legislature ought to face up to. I think that eventually, for a better school system in the state and for better education, that redistricting should come about."

The 21-year board member suggested reorganization should come "within five years."

Marilyn Fowler's campaign to reduce the number of school districts in Nebraska is generating a response that has traditionally sidetracked reorganization: polarization.

The State Board of Education member is seeking support to eliminate three-fourths of the districts, and the expected opposition is chugging into battle positions.

But her efforts could result in more than just another rerun. Education spokesmen indicate Mrs. Fowler, of Lexington, is spurring momentum that could ready the consolidation issue for the Legislature in 1976.

But tangents spring from the central desire for quality education. Traditional diversions that could derail Mrs. Fowler's steamer:

- Taxation and school finance.
- Local control vs. state control.
- Effect and enforcement of education laws and standards.
- Condition of school buildings.
- Quality of instructional materials.

Basically Same Fight

Gov. J. James Exon said while he shares Mrs. Fowler's concern "regarding the quality of all schools," her suggestion that all the small Class I schools merge with their choice of K12 districts by 1978 is "basically the old fight of school district reorganization in Nebraska."

Exon said, "The State Department of Education and the State Board of Education have enough problems on their hands today with implementation of LB403 (special education)," without "looking to start some other education war."

To Mrs. Fowler's suggestion that the LB403 administrative nightmare has resulted in part from processing paperwork from 1,241 districts — more than in any state in the nation — the governor replied:

"From my knowledge of the way the State Department of Education has thus far mishandled 403, it's not because of the number of school districts."

U.S. Education Commissioner Ted Bell presents another view: "Some states have more than 1,000 school districts. Many are permitting small, inefficient school districts to operate in close proximity to other small, inefficient school districts. This needs legislative attention."

State Has 7% Of Total

Nebraska State Education Association (NSEA) Executive Director Paul Belz of Lincoln pointed out: "We have in this state 7% of the school districts of the nation. We have fewer than 1% of the students enrolled. There is a disparity there that cannot be justified under any stretch of the imagination."

Belz said the NSEA, representing teachers, has had a "long-standing position" to reorganize Nebraska into K12 districts, and the NSEA Delegate Assembly may address the issue in April.

Exon opposes mandatory school district reorganization. He admits "there are too many school districts in the state, but I have always felt strongly about local control of schools, so long as those schools provide the level of education that is necessary and required by state law."

Mrs. Fowler has charged that some small rural districts operate inefficiently and show disinterest in or flagrant disregard for minimum educational standards.

Small Not All Bad

Exon said, "I'm sure there are some that would be substandard." However, "I just don't buy that concept that because you have a small school, that's a bad school. In many instances, I think the reverse is true."

Exon said that if there are 923 nonaccredited or nonapproved districts — as Mrs. Fowler has said — "we should take a look at our rules and regulations, to make sure they are realistic." He added, "Sometimes standards are written that aren't reasonable."

State board member Frank Landis of Lincoln said, "I would think that it's a matter the Legislature ought to face up to. I think that eventually, for a better school system in the state and for better education, that redistricting should come about."

The 21-year board member suggested reorganization should come "within five years."

Israel 'Negative' To Egypt's Move

By The Associated Press

Israeli Premier Yitzhak Rabin said Sunday that Israel would take as a "negative indication" Egypt's announced refusal to extend the mandate of U.N. peacekeeping forces in the Sinai Desert for more than three months.

Rabin was displeased at Egyptian President Anwar Sadat's announcement in Cairo on Saturday that he will renew the U.N. peace force's mandate for only three months, rather than the six-month periods the peacekeepers have been given by the U.N. Security Council until now.

"The maintenance of the U.N. forces in their present form is part of the overall framework of the disengagement agreements" separating Israeli and Egyptian troops, Rabin said in Israel's first official comment on Sadat's speech.

"Israel will regard as a negative indication the non-renewal of the U.N. forces' mandate, or the alteration of its timespan."

Rabin said it was "vital that the United States pursue its peace-seeking efforts in the Middle East."

Rabin's statement, at a special cabinet session in Jerusalem, ignored Sadat's announcement that he would reopen the Suez Canal on June 5 after an eight-year shutdown. The Suez Canal Authority on Sunday ordered 24-hour shifts for its employees to ready the 103-mile waterway for traffic and said transit tolls would be increased 50 per cent because of inflation. Tolls in 1967 were about $1 per ton for loaded vessels and 45 cents for unloaded vessels.

Although Sadat's speech had been taken in the West as moderate and some Israeli officials earlier had welcomed the pledge to open the canal, Rabin had little positive to say about Sadat's address.

Rabin's statement began by saying Israel was "ready to advance to peace in any possible way. This can be done by advancing in stages, through an interim settlement with Egypt" — the deal Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger tried unsuccessfully to achieve on his Middle East diplomatic shuttle earlier this month.

It added Israel was ready to participate in the Geneva peace conference, which may be called into session following the failure of Kissinger's mission.

"Israel regards it as vital that the United States continue to offer its good offices in achieving peace in this area," the statement said.

"This is important for the achievement of an interim settlement with Egypt and also for the preparation of the Geneva conference," it said.

Sadat also expressed interest in pursuing the step-by-step method.

Thousands Hear Mass In Jerusalem

By The Associated Press

Bells pealed out the joyous message of the risen Christ on Easter Sunday as brilliant sunshine bathed the holy city of Jerusalem and as Pope Paul at the Vatican urged that the disappointments of earthly life be viewed in the light and promise of Jesus' resurrection.

A high mass was held in Jerusalem in the Church of the Holy Sepulchre, traditional burial place of Jesus, and was attended by thousands of holy land Christians and pilgrims from the United States, Europe and the Far East.

But for all the joy and peace of the celebrations there were constant reminders that the war is not over in the Middle East.

An Israeli policeman politely rummaged through any handbag that seemed overly large before letting its bearer into the towering crusader-built church.

Armed troops mingled among the tourists and merchants cramming the narrow alleys of the old walled city where the church stands.

The Latin patriarch of Jerusalem, Archbishop G. G. Beltritti, conducted the mass in the Church of the Holy Sepulchre. The service was a rainbow of colors — the archbishop in white and crimson, yellow candle flame flickering in the sunlit chapels, monks in black and even blue-capped U.N. soliders on leave from their peacekeeping bases on the Middle East front lines.

The rich chords of an organ and a choir of nuns swelled through the cavernous domed-top chambers of the church. A friar carried a flame at the end of a long stick and lit the 10-foot-tall candles at the entrance to the grotto of Christ's tomb.

At the Vatican, Pope Paul told a crowd of 300,000 gathered in St. Peter's Square under blue spring skies: "The resurrection of Christ is not only a personal triumph of His, it is also the principle of our salvation and hence of our resurrection."

"It does not matter, brethren, if the experience of the frailty of human powers daily disappoints our fragile hopes for a stable ordering of human society."

"Nor does it matter if from the daily progress generated by

Tornado Leaves 1 In 4 Homeless

WARREN, Ark. (AP) — One in four of Warren's residents was homeless Easter Sunday as cleanup work continued in the aftermath of a tornado that killed seven persons and injured many more.

Police Chief Tommy Dunnaway said all of the homeless found shelter "with neighbors and friends, or at the relief centers at the YMCA and the churches."

All persons believed missing had been located by Saturday night, Dunnaway said.

He said several persons injured in the Good Friday tornado were in critical condition Sunday.

"I don't think that bad as things are that people aren't going to church today," Dunnaway said. "The Westside Baptist Church got blown away, but I'm sure they're having services somewhere. People still feel they have a lot to be thankful for."

Friday's tornado was the third to rip through Warren in 30 years. The worst, on Jan. 3, 1949, killed 57 persons, injured 92 and destroyed more than 200 homes.

The Red Cross estimated Friday's tornado destroyed 126 homes, heavily damaged 67 and caused minor damage to 171.

Gov. David Pryor, after touring the area Saturday, estimated the damage at between $8 million and $10 million and asked President Ford to designate Bradley County as a major disaster area.

The largest employer in Warren, the Potlatch Lumber Co., said damage to its facilities will total somewhat "less than $10 million." A company spokesman said its Warren lumberyard, which employs more than 600 persons, would be closed for at least two to three weeks.

Southwestern Bell said it would have most of its service restored by Monday, and estimated damage at $125,000.

The National Weather Service said it issued a tornado warning just before the tornado struck shortly before 8 p.m., but most persons were caught off guard.

The death count reached seven Saturday afternoon with the death of Genteval Morgan, 85, of Warren. She had been hospitalized with injuries from the storm.

Authorities identified the other dead as Ellis Clanton, 61, Fay McKinstry, 45, John Frey, 75, Danny Boyd, 22, Brenda Stoddard, 41, and Marilyn Robertson, 36, all of Warren.

Gunmen Pump 4 Bullets Into Yugoslavia Diplomat

LYON, France (AP) — The Yugoslav vice consul in Lyon, Mladen Dugovic, was reported in serious condition Sunday after two gunmen pumped four bullets into him.

The 36-year-old diplomat was unconscious at a Lyon hospital and could not be questioned.

Dugovic was shot late Saturday night as he was parking his car in a garage underneath his apartment building. The gunmen fled.

The motive for the shooting was not known, but investigators said the assailants may have acted for political reasons.

Three years ago, Dugovic told police he suspected a bomb had been planted in his car, but none was found.

His fears coincided with Yugoslav President Tito's crushing of a separatist movement by Croatian and Serbian nationalists in his country.

A small group of separatists is believed to be active among the Yugoslav expatriates in France.

Prince Was Sane

Riyadh, Saudi Arabia — The young Saudi prince who assassinated King Faisal has been examined and found to have been sane at the time of the killing, the Saudi government radio said on Sunday. A broadcast from this royal capital city, as translated by an Information Ministry official, announced that after the current investigation into the murder is finished, the assassin, Prince Faisal, would be tried according to Islamic law.

Scandal Wide Spread

New York — Grim disclosures of misery and profiteering in the care of aged Americans are being made with increasing frequency around the country. While those since last year have focused on abuses in the New York metropolitan area reports from a score of states indicate that the scandal in the nursing-home industry has reached nationwide proportions.

Program Drained

Washington — Deceptions and errors are draining away hundreds of millions of dollars budgeted to feed hungry Americans under the federal food stamp program. This is clearly indicated by the Department of Agriculture's latest and — according to most observers — most accurate statistics on the rapidly growing food stamp program. Losses resulting from "errors" — deceptive practices — and simple mathematical mistakes are estimated at $740 million a year.

Layoffs Planned

New York — Over the next three years, the Ford Foundation plans to lay off about 300 professional and other employees in a money-saving program. The layoffs will cut the foundation's local and overseas staff in half.

Louisiana Sniper Kills Two, Then Himself

WEST MONROE, La., (AP) — A sniper opened fire from a second-story apartment window early Sunday, killing two persons and wounding a third before killing himself, police said.

Coroner Herbert Van Buren identified the sniper of Bob A.

Howard, 29. The coroner said Howard recently returned to this north-central Louisiana city from Colorado to visit his mother and step-father.

Van Buren identified the dead men as Daryl Evers, 21, of Jackson, Miss., and Ronald G. Mitchell, 32, of West Monroe.

The coroner and Asst. Police Chief Charles Dortch said they found cards which indicated Howard had been treated at a hospital in Colorado and had been an outpatient for two weeks at a mental health facility in Louisiana.

The coroner also said a suicide note was found, but Dortch said it was not a suicide note as such but that "there were several notations and letters which indicated that trouble was brewing."

"There was correspondence in the room which indicated the young man was having some types of problems, was upset and disturbed. One note did refer to a lady named Joanie, but didn't say any more about her," Dortch said.

He said Howard's home town and occupation in Colorado were not known.

Police said Howard opened fire with a 30-30 lever action rifle from a second-floor window of the Westwood Town House apartments, hitting Dane Evers, 18, of Jackson in the head and shoulders as he walked out the front door.

Daryl Evers tried to help his fallen brother and was shot down on the doorstep, police said.

Mitchell, meantime, was walking to a pickup truck with his wife and child when he heard the shots, police said. He told his family to run inside, then was hit by two gunshots, officers said.

An unidentified off-duty policeman living in the complex said he heard a muffled shot a minute or so later. After searching for half an hour, police said they located Howard's body in the upstairs apartment of his mother and stepfather.

Dane Evers was taken to a hospital where he was listed in satisfactory condition.

Study Of Chicano Pupils Runs Into Snags

Monday, March 31, 1975 The Lincoln Star 3

By EDWARD W. HOWARD
Associated Press Writer

The state Mexican-American Commission is running into some resistance, and a little hostility, as it attempts to launch a study centering on Chicano students in Nebraska public schools.

"We have run into two kinds of resistance from school officials," says Stan Porras, commission director.

"Some school officials wonder whether we are questioning their integrity," Porras said, "and others, the ones that are hostile, say that we are discriminating because we aren't looking for information about Greek, Russian and Italian Americans."

Some school officials, who Porras did not name, "have called and said they won't fill out the questionnaires we sent them."

The commission sent out 326 questionnaires earlier this month.

"All they (the questionnaires) will do is tell us where the Mexican-American students are, and how many of them there are," Porras said. "They would provide the same information about Chicano teachers."

The questionnaires that hopefully will locate Nebraska's Mexican-American students are just the first step in what Porras hopes will be a much larger study.

"The U.S. Commission on Civil Rights has published two major studies in the past two years dealing with Chicanos in Anglo schools," Porras said. "We eventually hope to do the same kind of study, centering exclusively on Nebraska."

Once the commission knows where

Mexican-American students go to school "we can get to the heart of this thing, by checking their school records with permission from their parents to determine how they are doing in school."

Then, Porras said, "we try to determine why they are, or are not, doing well."

The latter stage of the study is the most important, Porras said, "because you get into examining teacher attitudes towards Chicanos."

One report from the Civil Rights Commission says "the commission's findings regarding Anglo and Mexican-American students show that the average Anglo pupil receives about 40% more positive response from the teacher than does the average Chicano pupil."

"Eventually, we would try to determine the situation in Nebraska classrooms," Porras said.

"The problem is that if we continue to run into this kind of resistance, it's going to take a lot more time," Porras said. For example, if school officials refuse to check the records of Chicano students for the commission "then we have to send our own people to do it, and that takes time and money."

Porras said he would like to have the study nearly completed by the time the 1976 Legislature rolls around.

"We would like to have the information for the Department of Education and the Legislature, because it would help in showing the need for bilingual-bicultural education programs," Porras said.

World Drug Abuse Said Critical

Washington (UPI) — U.S. Sen. Roman Hruska, R-Neb., charged Sunday the extent of drug abuse throughout the world is of "critical proportions."

"Hundreds of pounds of deadly drugs are being illegally diverted from international commerce," Hruska said, "and ending up for sale in the streets of major cities around the globe."

Hruska said he has introduced a bill to aid the international control of "mind-altering drugs."

The legislation, Hruska said, would amend existing U.S. drug laws to implement the terms of an international agreement reached in Vienna in 1971 to improve the control of drugs excluded under existing drug treaties.

Hruska noted because "Mind-altering drugs" such as amphetamines, barbiturates and tranquilizers are "relatively new to both licit and illicit channels, they have never been subjected to similar treaties and regulations."

The ranking Republican member on the Senate Judiciary Committee said opium and other hard drugs are manufactured in countries which export insignificant quantities of mind altering drugs. These drugs, Hruska said, are manufactured in the United States and Europe.

"It is possible," Hruska said, "that the failure to adequately regulate domestic activity in such drugs will embarrass and hinder U.S. efforts to have tighter international controls placed over the production of narcotic crops in these other countries."

McCollister Joins Effort For Government Control

Washington (UPI) — Rep. John Y. McCollister, R-Neb., Sunday said it was "absolutely essential" the growth and control powers of the federal government be halted.

McCollister said he has joined on cosponsoring the fiscal integrity act authored by Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., which would limit government revenues and require a balanced federal budget

"Big government contributes more to our economic problems today than to their solution," McCollister said. "It is absolutely essential that we find some means of halting the growth of the federal government and its control over the private decisions of our people."

Under the fiscal integrity act, expenditures couldn't exceed revenues except by a 2/3 vote of the Congress.

McCollister charged that Congress has "demonstrated an unwillingness to make the hard choices to deny special interest spending and exercise fiscal restraint."

"It therefore becomes necessary," McCollister said, "to draw up ground rules that will enforce a more responsible expenditure of federal tax dollars."

Oh, Fiddle Fiddle! Rain Go Away

UNION GROVE, N.C. (AP) — Torrential rains forced thousands of young people attending the 51st Old Time Fiddlers Convention to high ground early Sunday, the highway patrol said.

A small, homemade bridge was the only exit. Authorities had reported the bridge was washed away by high water, but witnesses said it was standing early Sunday and some vehicles not stuck in the mud were using it to leave the area.

No deaths or serious injuries were reported.

An estimated 100,000 persons, most of them college-age, had converged on the 150-acre farm 40 miles west of Winston-Salem for the annual Easter weekend bluegrass festival.

"The rains stopped just in time, I guess. And things mainly took care of themselves," said a deputy sheriff in Iredell County.

"At one time we had flash flood warnings in effect and that caused a disturbance and quite a bit of confusion," he said. "I'd say about one-third of them have left and others are still trying to get out."

Study Of Chicano Pupils Runs Into Snags

By EDWARD W. HOWARD
Associated Press Writer

The state Mexican-American Commission is running into some resistance, and a little hostility, as it attempts to launch a study centering on Chicano students in Nebraska public schools.

"We have run into two kinds of resistance from school officials," says Stan Porras, commission director.

"Some school officials wonder whether we are questioning their integrity," Porras said, "and others, the ones that are hostile, say that we are discriminating because we aren't looking for information about Greek, Russian and Italian Americans."

Some school officials, who Porras did not name, "have called and said they won't fill out the questionnaires we sent them."

The commission sent out 326 questionnaires earlier this month.

"All they (the questionnaires) will do is tell us where the Mexican-American students are, and how many of them there are," Porras said. "They would provide the same information about Chicano teachers."

The questionnaires that hopefully will locate Nebraska's Mexican-American students are just the first step in what Porras hopes will be a much larger study.

"The U.S. Commission on Civil Rights has published two major studies in the past two years dealing with Chicanos in Anglo schools," Porras said. "We eventually hope to do the same kind of study, centering exclusively on Nebraska."

Once the commission knows where

Mexican-American students go to school "we can get to the heart of this thing, by checking their school records with permission from their parents to determine how they are doing in school."

Then, Porras said, "we try to determine why they are, or are not, doing well."

The latter stage of the study is the most important, Porras said, "because you get into examining teacher attitudes towards Chicanos."

One report from the Civil Rights Commission says "the commission's findings regarding Anglo and Mexican-American students show that the average Anglo pupil receives about 40% more positive response from the teacher than does the average Chicano pupil."

"Eventually, we would try to determine the situation in Nebraska classrooms," Porras said.

"The problem is that if we continue to run into this kind of resistance, it's going to take a lot more time," Porras said. For example, if school officials refuse to check the records of Chicano students for the commission "then we have to send our own people to do it, and that takes time and money."

Porras said he would like to have the study nearly completed by the time the 1976 Legislature rolls around.

"We would like to have the information for the Department of Education and the Legislature, because it would help in showing the need for bilingual-bicultural education programs," Porras said.

World Drug Abuse Said Critical

Washington (UPI) — U.S. Sen. Roman Hruska, R-Neb., charged Sunday the extent of drug abuse throughout the world is of "critical proportions."

"Hundreds of pounds of deadly drugs are being illegally diverted from international commerce," Hruska said, "and ending up for sale in the streets of major cities around the globe."

Hruska said he has introduced a bill to aid the international control of "mind-altering drugs."

The legislation, Hruska said, would amend existing U.S. drug laws to implement the terms of an international agreement reached in Vienna in 1971 to improve the control of drugs excluded under existing drug treaties.

Hruska noted because "Mind-altering drugs" such as amphetamines, barbiturates and tranquilizers are "relatively new to both licit and illicit channels, they have never been subjected to similar treaties and regulations."

The ranking Republican member on the Senate Judiciary Committee said opium and other hard drugs are manufactured in countries which export insignificant quantities of mind altering drugs. These drugs, Hruska said, are manufactured in the United States and Europe.

"It is possible," Hruska said, "that the failure to adequately regulate domestic activity in such drugs will embarrass and hinder U.S. efforts to have tighter international controls placed over the production of narcotic crops in these other countries."

UNION GROVE, N.C. (AP) — Torrential rains forced thousands of young people attending the 51st Old Time Fiddlers Convention to high ground early Sunday, the highway patrol said.

The rains stopped shortly after dawn, leaving much of the festival site, a cow pasture on the J. Pierce Van Hoy farm, in mud. The patrol said hundreds of campers, trailers and cars were mired in the sticky stuff.

A small, homemade bridge was the only exit. Authorities had reported the bridge was washed away by high water, but witnesses said it was standing early Sunday and some vehicles not stuck in the mud were using it to leave the area.

Bad Rule Scuttles Good Bill

Before the Legislature adjourned last Wednesday for the Easter recess, Sen. Jerome Warner of Waverly tried in vain to raise LB113, a bill to ban hunting in roadside ditches. The bill had been killed in the Constitutional Revision and Recreation Committee on a 4-3 vote.

There are two important aspects of Warner's futile effort which are worth mentioning.

One is that the bill is good legislation. It would repeal last year's legislative authorization to hunt from roadside ditches. At that time The Star joined rural senators and others in observing that the unwise gift to the lazy hunter would result in a worsening of relations between rural landowners and hunters and that it would create additional traffic hazards.

Sadly, we are in a position along with the others to say "we told you so," and we willingly so state. The relationship between farmers and hunters "is souring," as Sen. Bill Burrows of Adams said last week. And at least one fatal accident on a rural road has been attributed to a parked car belonging to roadside hunters.

The authorization should be repealed and it is obvious a majority of senators agree with that position. The vote to raise the bill won 29-13 support. It should be pointed out that an overwhelming majority of the 13 voting against calling the bill out on the floor were urban senators (eight from the Omaha area; two from Lincoln. It is a shame they didn't use better sense on this issue and show more sensitivity to a rural problem).

But far more important in this story is the recent rules change which allowed the clear will of the majority to be denied and prevented common sense from prevailing.

Lawmakers recently amended their rules and went back to requiring 30 votes, instead of 25, to overrule committee action.

Thus the Warner motion failed by one vote.

And thus four senators (those in the committee majority) prevented 29 from working their will. We think that is giving too much power to the committees.

Under these rules, a bill can be enacted into law with 25 votes but can't be raised from the committee graveyard without 30 votes.

Warner's bill conceivably had enough votes to pass but not enough to have it considered on the floor of the Legislature.

The rules change was a move in the wrong direction. The one-house legislative system has a place for strong committees and rightfully so, but the committees should not be so strong that majority will is perverted with ease. The move just a few years ago to 25 votes from the 30-vote rule was sensible. It is too bad the senators retreated into the past to dredge up discarded rules that thwart majority rule.

Another Try At Price-Fixing

We're anxiously awaiting the Legislature's action on LB204, which would require a markup of at least 15% on all liquor sold at retail.

Twice past legislatures have sent such a liquor price fixing measure to Gov. Exon and twice the governor has successfully vetoed the bills.

The current bill, as the others, is backed by most liquor retailers. It is aimed at the big volume operator who lowers prices and at grocery or drug stores which sell liquor at cost or just above to attract customers for their other items.

While it may be appealing at first blush to argue in favor of a bill which will help the "little guy," the small volume liquor retailer, if one listens to the little guy's lobbyist, James Moylan, 90% of the liquor business in the state goes to the little guy anyway, so there's really no need for a markup floor.

There's another little guy we're more concerned about, and that is the consumer. A guaranteed minimum markup guarantees an increase in the price of the product, period. It would be so in the liquor business and in any other business — should the Legislature want to use what would be a dangerous precedent to start fixing prices for other goods and services.

Hopefully the Legislature will keep the consumer in mind this time and kill LB204. And hopefully if it doesn't, the gubernatorial veto will be sustained.

This is legislation of the kind the state can live without. We urge readers to watch how the voting lines are drawn on this.

Glad To Be 'Dangerous'

I would like to respond to Chamber of Commerce director Dick Chapin's accusation that as a City Council person, I would be "damned dangerous to the future of the community." (Star, March 28)

I would hope that by encouraging working people to organize strong democratic grass-roots unions, I would be "damned dangerous" to the lucrative profits of the commercial interests of Lincoln. The "O Street Gang" is not "the community." Of course, I am not "the community" either, but most of the people of this community suffer at the hands of the monied interests of Lincoln.

I would hope that by encouraging progressive-tax reform, I would help low and middle-income people and through confiscating the wealth of the rich through progressive taxation, I would be "damned dangerous" to the "O Street Gang," Stuart Enterprises (KFOR, etc.) and the other affluent business and corporations of Lincoln. Let's open up the accounting books of the businesses of the Chamber of Commerce and see just who is "damned dangerous" to whom.

In an important sense, the members of the Chamber of Commerce are a danger to most of the people in this community through their high prices, low wages and boring, powerless, self-destructive jobs.

I feel complimented being called "damned dangerous" by a leader in the Lincoln Chamber of Commerce. With enemies like that, I feel like a friend to lots of people who are taken advantage of every day by the businesses of Lincoln.

RON KURTENBACH

Wants More Buses

I am rediscovering an old convenience — the public transportation system. At the moment I am without a driver's license and the cab is too dear.

I do not recommend it as a family's only form of transportation, due to the limited amount we in Lincoln can be exposed to it, but for going to and from town during its running hours, it is both economical and convenient.

Often as I drove around suburbia, I was aware of young people hitch-hiking and the hazards they are tempting by it. As I picked them up, I would gently lecture them on these; 75% admitted these were true but didn't know how else to get around with no buses, available friends, cars, etc. They favored a cheap and convenient network of public conveyances. They weren't too particular about the style at night. Mini-buses would be fine. Anything would be better than standing in slushy cold snow on a busy or — worse yet — deserted street hoping to catch a ride.

Wednesday, "Y" night for the kids, left my daughter arriving home quite late. The buses didn't run and what 11-year-old has $2.15 for a cab? She had the promise of a ride that didn't pan out. She didn't heed my offer to pay the tab when she arrived home and took a safe, economical but long time in arriving home via a friend's house.

My son, age 13, is fortunately abstaining from hitch-hiking after a serious discussion about devil worshippers.

In looking to the future, I wonder how they are going to take advantage of all the cultural (or otherwise) events Lincoln has to offer — even after I drive again. I can't always be at their command, as I work for a living and become preoccupied at this endeavor.

I have only touched on the economy of this affair, but the savings in gasoline costs have been noticeable. Car pools are great but not always possible. We must also remember that the rocking-chair of the senior citizen lacks wheels.

We talk ecology but make it impossible to efficiently practice when there is nothing but a sketchy skeleton of a mass transportation system to rely on. Having been exposed to the potential of one, it could be an "in thing" that would catch on.

I suddenly became very serious about the need for it when it directly affected an intimately known VIP — ME!

BETTY JANE SIMPSON

We're For Law And Order

In an editorial in the March 20 Star, "Keep Your Perspective," you commend Mrs. Virginia Smith, congresswoman from the Third District for speaking up for what is right about America. Then followed some of the favorite dirty tricks of the liberal press and the more liberal electronic media — guilt by association. You have absolutely NO grounds to imply that Mrs. Smith had any but good intentions or that she was preparing for a "Watergate" type of action.

I am getting a little tired of the liberal media continually harping on Watergate. You try to associate anybody to the right of H. H. Humphrey with the Watergate episode, thereby destroying them politically. You never give up. Watergate has been a real boost for the Democrats and all liberals. It was used to get a veto-proof Congress — far too many liberals — elected the past election.

Do not get me wrong. I do not condone such tactics, whether by Democrats or Republicans. Mr. Nixon campaigned on law and order, return of more power to the states, cutting the bureaucracy of the federal government, etc. In other words, as a conservative. The idea is still valid. THAT, Mr. Editor, is why Richard Nixon was elected by such a majority vote in 1972. Whether you want to admit it or not, the real tragedy of Watergate was the fact the liberals used it to negate the 1972 election — a mandate by voters to swing the country more conservative. Mr. Nixon and company were only doing what the Democrats before him had done so effectively for so long. I condemn such tactics; you merely turn your head.

Dirty tricks? Burglars? Remember the 1964 election? Any Democrat or liberal who has the guts to talk about dirty tricks in 1972 can't remember '64 or is so biased that it proves my point.

What was stolen at Watergate? Not even a paper clip, so far as I can find out. Your pride and joy, Jack Anderson, wrote that enough votes were stolen in Illinois, Missouri and Texas to swing the 1960 election in favor of John Kennedy. No national scandal there. J.F.K. was one of yours. I have spent a lot of time in L.B.J.'s part of the country. Don't talk to me about dirty tricks or burglars.

Illegal and unethical funds? Income tax scandal? H. Humphrey qualifies to be condemned on both counts, but it is rarely mentioned.

The tone of your editorial leaves me with the impression that you are also opposed to law and order. I cannot believe any but the criminally inclined could believe any civilization can long survive without law and order.

He Works 80-Hour Week

I am a UN-L faculty member writing in response to B. V. T. (Star, March 24), who wants to bring some efficient management into higher education in this state.

I would like to report that I kept accurate track of my hours of work for the past few weeks — university work, not my own research. It turns out that I work about an 80-hour week. Figuring overtime pay, that comes out to something under $2.70 per hour.

Considering that I spent five years in training for this job, I don't think that is an extravagant salary. Perhaps it is not quite high enough.

I may just add that if I worked a "full 40-hour week," as B. V. T. suggests, instead of my usual 80, I would have to cancel half of my lectures and either give up office hours or quit grading exams.

Security For Israel

WASHINGTON — The sudden, destabilizing events in the Middle East come at a poignant time for Jews: Passover, the holiday that for so many centuries symbolized the hope of return to the land is Israel. The embodiment of that dream, present-day Israel, seems more than ever at risk in a hostile world.

In Israel itself, the breakdown of Secretary Kissinger's peace efforts has predictably intensified the embattled atmosphere. There is resentment of what is seen as American pressure to give up vital territory in the Sinai in return for something less than an Egyptian declaration of non-belligerence.

It is always risky for outsiders to tell the Israelis what they ought to do. They bear the reality of danger, and they live with the fear that the Arabs talk of settlement but really want to destroy them. But respect for Israel's fears cannot be allowed to suspend reasoned discussion.

Israel's premise in so tenaciously resisting return of the territories taken in the 1967 war must be that she is being asked to give up a position of strength. The territories provide security, that is. But that premise is faulty in a number of ways.

First, the land occupied in 1967 is less and less significant in terms of physical security. New weapons will cover the distance involved and more. The next war will be more destructive than the others, whatever the particular boundaries. And militarily, time is running against Israel.

The economic power of the Arabs is beginning to tell, and they are narrowing the gap with Israel in the mastery of military technology.

Second, retention of the occupied territories is sapping the already diminished reservoir of good will toward Israel in the world. Prof. Stanley Hoffmann of Harvard, one of the wisest foreign affairs specialists in this country, has written of the danger of Israel's "isolation, physical and mental" from its neighbors and indeed from much of the outside world. The United States is almost the only pipeline to the world . . .

Third, it is a delusion to think that Israel can ever get true non-belligerence from her neighbors unless and until she returns the occupied territories. No Arab leader could last on such a basis. Professor Hoffmann after a visit to Israel said people there long for and talk of "real peace" — meaning trade with the Arabs, and tourists, and so on. But those can come only at the end of a process.

Professor Hoffmann's views are given in a remarkable article in the April issue of "Foreign Affairs." It is a piece of large scope, rich in detail and striking in analysis. Its central argument is for a "sweeping Israeli initiative aimed at a peace settlement."

Israel is going to have to return the occupied territories eventually, Hoffmann argues. Instead of putting that truth out of mind and worrying about interim details, she should now face the issue, decide and disclose what she is ultimately willing to do in return for true peace — and then concentrate on ways to assure the stability of final borders through a political structure. In short, Israel would recognize Arab rights and talk about security instead of resisting those rights and talking as if security lay in Israeli possession.

Nobody can deny that there is risk in the political course — but standing pat carries worse risk in the long-run. For a small country such as Israel, safety lies in a position where the largest number of outside persons and powers feels a responsibility toward her. That means drawing the Soviet Union into the picture and hopefully — difficult as it would be — making Soviet agreement with the U.S. on Israel's security a base price of detente.

Secretary Kissinger's shuttle diplomacy was probably a mistake in one respect: It encouraged the Israelis to put off the larger questions of peace and focus on yards of desert and verbal formulas in a secret setting that nurtured suspicions among Israeli factions and their American supporters.

But the Kissinger method had a crucial accomplishment: It got President Sadat talking realistically about Israel as a permanent fact. It had him acting in terms of living with Israel and going on to questions of bettering life for Egyptians.

All that was much more important than any form of words, and it has been set back a long way.

Joblessness And Crime

WASHINGTON — Thousands of decent but depressed Americans have been driven to crime by the economic downturn.

In cold, clinical language, an unpublished Library of Congress study describes the relationship between unemployment and crime. "As unemployment rises," declares the study, "so does the number of new prison admissions each year; as it falls, the number of prison admissions drops."

But cold studies cannot depict the human heartbeat behind the statistics. For another of our reports on the human side of the economic crisis, we checked with police forces around the nation to put faces on the statistics.

We found, predictably, that hunger, deprivation and sickness can drive the most honorable people to dishonorable deeds. Here are a few examples:

—In San Francisco, a desperate gunman held up a store to get the money his mother and sister needed for medical care. While holding the shopkeeper hostage, he called his family in Texas to inquire how they were doing. The merchant, touched by the conversation, offered a donation to help the family. When the police arrived, they offered to fly the mother, sister and brother-in-law to San Francisco. The grateful, would-be robber surrendered, and the shopkeeper gave the desperate family $1,500.

—Not so lucky were a 45-year-old electrician and his 19-year-old son, who were charged with three armed robberies in the outskirts of Atlanta. They admitted to the crimes, saying they were both out of work and needed the money to pay pressing household bills.

—A Miami man has been holding up small grocery stores for two months now. In each case, he apologizes to his victims, explaining that his wife is dying and needs the money for her care.

—There is also the case of an unemployed Memphis carpenter who stole $84 from a small food store. He spent the money, police discovered, at another food store to feed his family.

The Library of Congress study, prepared for Sen. Quentin Burdick, D-N.D., points out that over 80% of the changes in federal prison admissions "could be statistically related to changes in unemployment."

In state prisons, unemployment could explain "over 76% of the changes in prison admissions." Although the study doesn't claim to have established "a direct causal link," it contends there is "less than one possibility in 1,000 that these relationships are due entirely to chance."

Joblessness could "pose a stark choice in economic terms," suggests the study, "for those who are on the border line of acceptable social action and must find alternative means of support."

Quite clearly, society pays for the recession in many painful ways.

Most members of Congress try to beef up their staffs at the taxpayers' expense. But Rep. Walter Jones, D-N.C., a hard-working, nine-year House veteran, has turned back $413,507 in his clerk hire pay to the U.S. Treasury. With the other extras that go along with Capitol Hill jobs, he has saved the taxpayers well over $500,000.

Ex-President Richard Nixon has been reduced to four government secretaries — Rose Mary Woods, who is paid $36,000 a year; Lois Gaunt, $18,061; Nora Vandersommen, $15,059; and Joanne Miller, $15,059.

Some U.S. embassies have been currying favor with the host country's high muckamucks by giving visas to their friends, according to our diplomatic sources. A high official of one Caribbean country allegedly has been taking bribes to get visas from the U.S. embassy. The State Department is quietly investigating.

Sugar growers on the Caribbean island of St. Kitts, including some American citizens, have had their estates seized by the local government. In exchange, they have been given worthless bonds that can't be sold on the open market.

There is some danger in preparing a column several days in advance of publication.

The result sometimes can be a lyrical welcome to spring (last Monday) on a day of snow, sleet and super-wind.

(Parenthetically — yeah, I know, that's redundant — that reminds me of this week's heavy question for the philosophers among you: Why was the last week of winter so much nicer than the first week of spring?)

But back to the subject, however, tenuous. Today's column will deal with some events whose course may have changed by the time you read this. You are reading this, aren't you?

So if most — or none — of the following makes any sense, just ignore it. Sorta like you always do, okay?

First subject: rebates. What are you gonna do with your tax rebate?

Now, remember, if you stuff it under the bed or hide it with the socks, you're messing up the whole plan. If the rebate is going to work, you've got to spend it — the quicker, the better.

You will probably be flooded with "tax rebate" sales the moment the checks are in the mail. Should provide a lot of revenue for my employer as the merchants jostle and elbow one another for your money.

You're supposed to get between $100 and $200, enough to buy a new television set, a stereo, a quality camera, some new tires, new clothes, a couple sacks of groceries, maybe even some sugar or a full tank of gasoline.

Tough decision, huh?

You could take the neighbors out for a really big night on the town.

Or buy that new piece of furniture you've been wanting. Or redecorate a room. Or buy an electric train with all the accessories.

If it's too tough to decide, you could send it to me. And as a patriotic citizen, willing to do my part to help spur the economy back into high gear, I'd promise to spend it real quick.

Second subject: the holiday. Tomorrow is April 1, a day in which, you will notice, many of your fellow workers take particular pride.

Look around the office or the plant (or whatever) tomorrow, and you will see a special secret glow on some of the faces. Proudly, quietly, they know it's their day.

They don't like to talk about it. You won't hear any of them saying: "This is my day. This day is in honor of me."

But you'll be able to pick them out.

One may sit at the desk directly behind you. (Hee, hee.)

One may sit at the very front of the office, directing traffic, managing the telephone, working steadily away — and not missing a single misstep by a fellow worker. (Hee, hee.)

And I'm sure if you keep looking around tomorrow, you may spot more of them. Quietly celebrating their very own day.

Let me know how many of them you can find. I'll not be there. Never work on a holiday, you know.

Subject Number Three: legislative break.

The Unicameral is in recess, due back Wednesday for a final seven-week dash.

Accomplishments thus far: minimal.

Major enactments: none.

Major tax and spending decisions have not yet been made. The budget remains in the Appropriations Committee, unresolved. Tax bills are on the floor, their fate in doubt.

Senators have plowed through three months of deliberations, setting the stage for what may be a dramatic close.

Vetoes are steadily pouring out of the office of Governor Exon, producing the usual legislative-executive confrontations.

The budget may trigger a showdown sometime in April or May — depending on what the Appropriations Committee decides to do.

Most of its decisions have already been made, but the major ones are all subject to change. After 53 days of legislative meetings this year, nothing has yet been determined about the budget for the University of Nebraska.

So the details of a budget battle are not yet clear. Yet the likelihood of a struggle is strong. Timing could help determine the winner.

If the budget is trapped in the committee for weeks, and if it becomes snarled in debate or processing on the floor, it could go bouncing over to the governor's office in the closing days of the session.

Exon will use his line item veto powers to reshape the document to his recommendations.

If the Legislature delays its decision-making to the final week of its session, the governor may have an opportunity to rewrite the budget to his liking.

If the Legislature wants to write its own budget (an interesting question), it will need to get with it when it returns to session this week.

Bad Rule Scuttles Good Bill

Before the Legislature adjourned last Wednesday for the Easter recess, Sen. Jerome Warner of Waverly tried in vain to raise LB113, a bill to ban hunting in roadside ditches. The bill had been killed in the Constitutional Revision and Recreation Committee on a 4-3 vote.

There are two important aspects of Warner's futile effort which are worth mentioning.

One is that the bill is good legislation. It would repeal last year's legislative authorization to hunt from roadside ditches. At that time The Star joined rural senators and others in observing that the unwise gift to the lazy hunter would result in a worsening of relations between rural landowners and hunters and that it would create additional traffic hazards.

Sadly, we are in a position along with the others to say "we told you so," and we willingly so state. The relationship between farmers and hunters "is souring," as Sen. Bill Burrows of Adams said last week. And at least one fatal accident on a rural road has been attributed to a parked car belonging to roadside hunters.

The authorization should be repealed and it is obvious a majority of senators agree with that position. The vote to raise the bill won 29-13 support. It should be pointed out that an overwhelming majority of the 13 voting against calling the bill out on the floor were urban senators (eight from the Omaha area; two from Lincoln. It is a shame they didn't use better sense on this issue and show more sensitivity to a rural problem).

But far more important in this story is the recent rules change which allowed the clear will of the majority to be denied and prevented common sense from prevailing.

Lawmakers recently amended their rules and went back to requiring 30 votes, instead of 25, to overrule committee action.

Thus the Warner motion failed by one vote.

And thus four senators (those in the committee majority) prevented 29 from working their will. We think that is giving too much power to the committees.

Under these rules, a bill can be enacted into law with 25 votes but can't be raised from the committee graveyard without 30 votes.

Warner's bill conceivably had enough votes to pass but not enough to have it considered on the floor of the Legislature.

The rules change was a move in the wrong direction. The one-house legislative system has a place for strong committees and rightfully so, but the committees should not be so strong that majority will is perverted with ease. The move just a few years ago to 25 votes from the 30-vote rule was sensible. It is too bad the senators retreated into the past to dredge up discarded rules that thwart majority rule.

Another Try At Price-Fixing

We're anxiously awaiting the Legislature's action on LB204, which would require a markup of at least 15% on all liquor sold at retail.

Twice past legislatures have sent such a liquor price fixing measure to Gov. Exon and twice the governor has successfully vetoed the bills.

The current bill, as the others, is backed by most liquor retailers. It is aimed at the big volume operator who lowers prices and at grocery or drug stores which sell liquor at cost or just above to attract customers for their other items.

While it may be appealing at first blush to argue in favor of a bill which will help the "little guy," the small volume liquor retailer, if one listens to the little guy's lobbyist, James Moylan, 90% of the liquor business in the state goes to the little guy anyway, so there's really no need for a markup floor.

There's another little guy we're more concerned about, and that is the consumer. A guaranteed minimum markup guarantees an increase in the price of the product, period. It would be so in the liquor business and in any other business — should the Legislature want to use what would be a dangerous precedent to start fixing prices for other goods and services.

Hopefully the Legislature will keep the consumer in mind this time and kill LB204. And hopefully if it doesn't, the gubernatorial veto will be sustained.

This is legislation of the kind the state can live without. We urge readers to draw how the voting lines are drawn on this.

Glad To Be 'Dangerous'

I would like to respond to Chamber of Commerce director Dick Chapin's accusation that as a City Council person, I would be "damned dangerous to the future of the community." (Star, March 28)

I would hope that by encouraging working people to organize strong democratic grass-roots unions, I would be "damned dangerous" to the lucrative profits of the commercial interests of Lincoln. The "O Street Gang" is not "the community." Of course, I am not "the community" either, but most of the people of this community suffer at the hands of the monied interests of Lincoln.

I would hope that by encouraging progressive tax reform, I would help low and middle-income people and through confiscating the wealth of the rich through progressive taxation, I would be "damned dangerous" to the "O Street Gang," Stuart Enterprises (KFOR, etc.) and the other affluent business and corporations of Lincoln. Let's open up the accounting books of the businesses of the Chamber of Commerce and see just who is "damned dangerous" to whom.

In an important sense, the members of the Chamber of Commerce are a danger to most of the people in this community through their high prices, low wages and boring, powerless, self-destructive jobs.

I feel complimented being called "damned dangerous" by a leader in the Lincoln Chamber of Commerce. With enemies like that, I feel like a friend to lots of people who are taken advantage of every day by the businesses of Lincoln.

Wants More Buses

I am rediscovering an old convenience — the public transportation system. At the moment I am without a driver's license and the cab is too dear.

I do not recommend it as a family's only form of transportation, due to the limited amount we in Lincoln can be exposed to it, but for going to and from town during its running hours, it is both economical and convenient.

Often as I drove around suburbia, I was aware of young people hitch-hiking and the hazards they are tempting by it. As I picked them up, I would gently lecture them on these: 75% admitted these were true but didn't know how else to get around with no buses, available friends, cars, etc. They favored a cheap and convenient network of public conveyances. They weren't too particular about the style at night. Mini-buses would be fine. Anything would be better than standing in slushy cold snow on a busy or — worse yet — deserted street hoping to catch a ride.

Wednesday, "Y" night for the kids, left my daughter arriving home quite late. The buses didn't run and what 11-year-old has $2.15 for a cab? She had the promise of a ride that didn't pan out. She didn't heed my offer to pay the tab when she arrived home and took a safe, economical but long time in arriving home via a friend's house.

My son, age 13, is fortunately abstaining from hitch-hiking after a serious discussion about devil worshippers.

In looking to the future, I wonder how they are going to take advantage of all the cultural (or otherwise) events Lincoln has to offer — even after I drive again. I can't always be at their command, as I work for a living and become preoccupied at this endeavor.

I have only touched on the economy of this affair, but the savings in gasoline costs have been noticeable. Car pools are great but not always possible. We must also remember that the rocking-chair of the senior citizen lacks wheels.

We talk ecology but make it impossible to efficiently practice when there is nothing but a sketchy skeleton of a mass transportation system to rely on. Having been exposed to the potential of one, it could be an "in thing that would catch on."

I suddenly became very serious about the need for it when it directly affected an intimately known VIP — ME!

We're For Law And Order

In an editorial in the March 20 Star, "Keep Your Perspective," you commend Mrs. Virginia Smith, congresswoman from the Third District for speaking up for what is right about America. Then followed some of the favorite dirty tricks of the liberal press and the more liberal electronic media — guilt by association. You have absolutely NO grounds to imply that Mrs. Smith had any but good intentions or that she was preparing for a "Watergate" type of action.

I am getting a little tired of the liberal media continually harping on Watergate. You try to associate anybody to the right of H. H. Humphrey with the Watergate episode, thereby destroying them politically. You never give up. Watergate has been a real boost for the Democrats and all liberals. It was used to get a veto-proof Congress — far too many liberals — elected the past election.

Do not get me wrong. I do not condone such tactics, whether by Democrats or Republicans. Mr. Nixon campaigned on law and order, return of more power to the states, cutting the bureaucracy of the federal government, etc. In other words, as a conservative. The idea is still valid. THAT, Mr. Editor, is why Richard Nixon was elected by such a majority vote in 1972. Whether you want to admit it or not, the real tragedy of Watergate was the fact the liberals used it to negate the 1972 election — a mandate by voters to swing the country more conservative. Mr. Nixon and company were only doing what the Democrats before him had done so effectively for so long. I condemn such tactics; you merely turn your head.

Dirty tricks? Burglars? Remember the 1964 election? Any Democrat or liberal who has the guts to talk about dirty tricks in 1972 can't remember '64 or is so biased that it proves my point.

What was stolen at Watergate? Not even a paper clip, so far as I can find out. Your pride and joy, Jack Anderson, wrote that enough votes were stolen in Illinois, Missouri and Texas to swing the 1960 election in favor of John Kennedy. No national scandal there. J.F.K. was one of yours. I have spent a lot of time in L.B.J.'s part of the country. Don't talk to me about dirty tricks or burglars.

Illegal and unethical funds? Income tax scandal? H. Humphrey qualifies to be condemned on both counts, but it is rarely mentioned.

The tone of your editorial leaves me with the impression that you are also opposed to law and order. I cannot believe any but the criminally inclined could believe any civilization can long survive without law and order.

He Works 80-Hour Week

I am a UN-L faculty member writing in response to B. V. T. (Star, March 24), who wants to bring some efficient management into higher education in this state.

I would like to report that I kept accurate track of my hours of work for the past few weeks — university work, not my own research. It turns out that I work about an 80-hour week. Figuring overtime pay, that comes out to something under $2.70 per hour.

Considering that I spent five years in training for this job, I don't think that is an extravagant salary. Perhaps it is not quite high enough.

I may just add that if I worked a "full 40-hour week," as B. V. T. suggests, instead of my usual 80, I would have to cancel half of my lectures and either give up office hours or quit grading exams.

Security For Israel

WASHINGTON — The sudden, destabilizing events in the Middle East come at a poignant time for Jews: Passover, the holiday that for so many centuries symbolized the hope of return to the land is Israel. The embodiment of that dream, present-day Israel, seems more than ever at risk in a hostile world.

In Israel itself, the breakdown of Secretary Kissinger's peace efforts has predictably intensified the embattled atmosphere. There is resentment of what is seen as American pressure to give up vital territory in the Sinai in return for something less than an Egyptian declaration of non-belligerency.

It is always risky for outsiders to tell the Israelis what they ought to do. They bear the reality of danger, and they live with the fear that the Arabs talk of settlement but really want to destroy them. But respect for Israel's fears cannot be allowed to suspend reasoned discussion.

Israel's premise in so tenaciously resisting return of the territories taken in the 1967 war must be that she is being asked to give up a position of strength. The territories provide security, that is. But that premise is faulty in a number of ways.

First, the land occupied in 1967 is less and less significant in terms of physical security. New weapons will cover the distance involved and more. The next war will be more destructive than the others, whatever the particular boundaries. And militarily, time is running against Israel.

The economic power of the Arabs is beginning to tell, and they are narrowing the gap with Israel in the mastery of military technology.

Second, retention of the occupied territories is sapping the already diminished reservoir of good will toward Israel in the world. Prof. Stanley Hoffmann of Harvard, one of the wisest foreign affairs specialists in this country, has written of the danger of Israel's "isolation, physical and mental" from its neighbors and indeed from much of the outside world. The United States is almost the only pipeline to the world . . .

Third, it is a delusion to think that Israel can ever get true non-belligerency from her neighbors unless and until she returns the occupied territories. No Arab leader could last on such a basis. Professor Hoffmann after a visit to Israel said people there long for and talk of "real peace" — meaning trade with the Arabs, and tourists, and so on. But those can come only at the end of a process.

Professor Hoffmann's views are given in a remarkable article in the April issue of "Foreign Affairs." It is a piece of large scope, rich in detail and striking in analysis. Its central argument is for a "sweeping Israeli initiative aimed at a peace settlement."

Israel is going to have to return the occupied territories eventually, Hoffmann argues. Instead of putting that truth out of mind and worrying about interim details, she should now face the issue, decide and disclose what she is ultimately willing to do in return for true peace — and then concentrate on ways to assure the stability of final borders through a political structure. In short, Israel would recognize Arab rights and talk about security instead of resisting those rights and talking as if security lay in Israeli possession.

Nobody can deny that there is risk in the political course — but standing pat carries worse risk in the long-run. For a small country such as Israel, safety lies in a position where the largest number of outside persons and powers feels a responsibility toward her. That means drawing the Soviet Union into the picture and hopefully — difficult as it would be — making Soviet agreement with the U.S. on Israel's security a base price of detente.

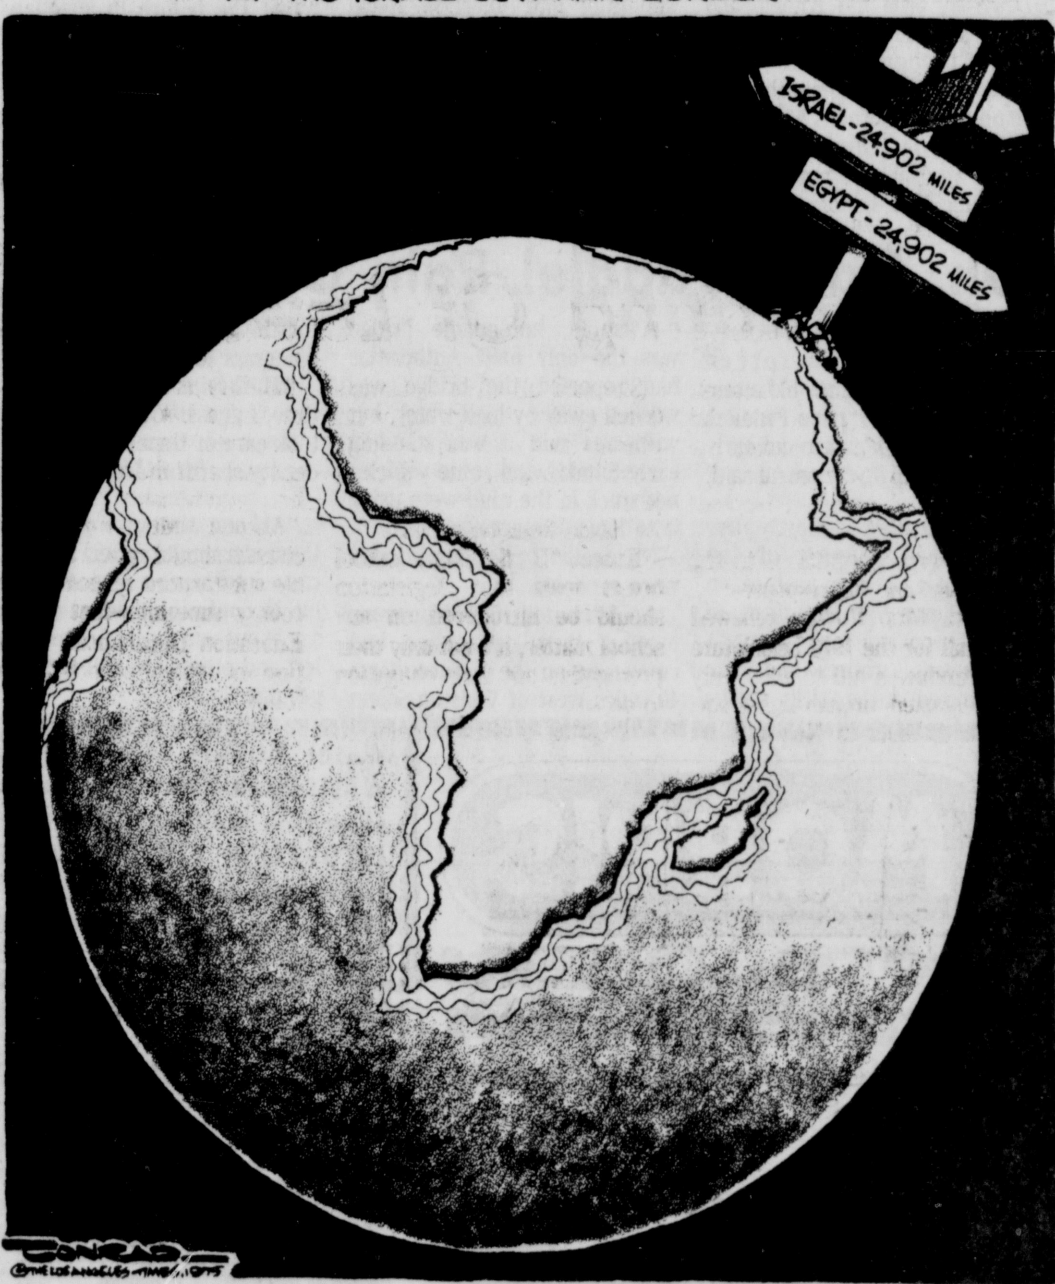

Secretary Kissinger's shuttle diplomacy was probably a mistake in one respect: It encouraged the Israelis to put off the larger questions of peace and focus on yards of desert and verbal formulas in a secret setting that nurtured suspicions among Israeli factions and their American supporters.

But the Kissinger method had a crucial accomplishment: It got President Sadat talking realistically about Israel as a permanent fact. It had him acting in terms of living with Israel and going on to questions of bettering life for Egyptians.

All that was much more important than any form of words, and it has been set back a long way.

Joblessness And Crime

WASHINGTON — Thousands of decent but depressed Americans have been driven to crime by the economic downturn.

In cold, clinical language, an unpublished Library of Congress study describes the relationship between unemployment and crime. "As unemployment rises," declares the study, "so does the number of new prison admissions each year; as it falls, the number of prison admissions drops."

But cold studies cannot depict the human heartbeat behind the statistics. For another of our reports on the human side of the economic crisis, we checked with police forces around the nation to put faces on the statistics.

We found, predictably, that hunger, deprivation and sickness can drive the most honorable people to dishonorable deeds. Here are a few examples:

—In San Francisco, a desperate gunman held up a store to get the money his mother and sister needed for medical care. While holding the shopkeeper hostage, he called his family in Texas to inquire how they were doing. The merchant, touched by the conversation, offered a donation to help the family. When the police arrived, they offered to fly the mother, sister and brother-in-law to San Francisco. The grateful, would-be robber surrendered, and the shopkeeper gave the desperate family $1,500.

—Not so lucky were a 45-year-old electrician and his 19-year-old son, who were charged with three armed robberies in the outskirts of Atlanta. They admitted to the crimes, saying they were both out of work and needed the money to pay pressing household bills.

—A Miami man has been holding up small grocery stores for two months now. In each case, he apologizes to his victims, explaining that his wife is dying and needs the money for her care.

—There is also the case of an unemployed Memphis carpenter who stole $84 from a small food store. He spent the money, police discovered, at another food store to feed his family.

The Library of Congress study, prepared for Sen. Quentin Burdick, D-N.D., points out that over 80% of the changes in federal prison admissions "could be statistically related to changes in unemployment."

In state prisons, unemployment could explain "over 78% of the changes in prison admissions." Although the study doesn't claim to have established "a direct causal link," it contends there is "less than one possibility in 1,000 that these relationships are due entirely to chance."

Joblessness could "pose a stark choice in economic terms," suggests the study, "for those who are on the border line of acceptable social action and must find alternative means of support."

Quite clearly, society pays for the recession in many painful ways.

Most members of Congress try to beef up their staffs at the taxpayers' expense. But Rep. Walter Jones, D-N.C., a hard-working, nine-year House veteran, has turned back $413,507 in his clerk hire pay to the U.S. Treasury. Buddies Remember Island War

By JOEL THORSON
Outstate Nebraska Bureau

Milford — Sometime Tuesday Milford reator H. L. "Pete" Petersen will place a long-distance call to his old friend Denny Pace, a retired Los Angeles policeman now living in Texas.

Petersen will ask him whether he had steak and eggs for breakfast. If the answer is no, he'll ask Pace if he knows what day it is.

Chances are, though, Pace will remember that the two men ate steak and eggs together 30 years ago Tuesday morning before hitting the beach at Okinawa.

Both men were in the 2nd Battalion, 4th Marine Regiment, 6th Marine Division, an element of the 10th Army amphibious force that captured the last bastion of Japanese resistance in the Pacific after some of the bitterest and costliest fighting of World War II.

Scranton, Pa.

The Okinawa campaign will be commemorated in August, when veterans of the 6th Marine Division reunite in Scranton, Pa., for four days of reminiscence. Petersen doubts that anyone he knows will be there and figures his phone call to Pace will suffice.

It was Easter Sunday, April 1st, 1945, the morning of the assault, and the American forces wondered if some kind of April Fool's joke were being played when no

Japanese resistance was encountered on the beach.

In reality, the Japanese were staking everything on an interior defense line protecting the southern end of the strategic island and its capital, Naha. Entrenched with their backs to the wall, just 400 miles from their home islands, the Japanese fought ferociously when the time came.

7,283 Americans Killed

In fact, when the smoke cleared 82 days later, 7,283 American soldiers had lost their lives and 31,398 had been injured. Of 27 men in Petersen's squad, only he, Pace and four others came through unscathed. "It was very treacherous," he says.

By comparison, Petersen says, the desperate Japanese suffered an appalling loss of over 130,000 lives, sometimes "making charges into certain death" to defend the key island in their nation's inner defense perimeter.

On one occasion, pinned down by artillery fire, Petersen recalls knowing with finality that he was about to die — before finding cover under a precipice. Another time, he says, he backed down rifle-armed Japanese soldiers with only a handgun, later to make the unenviable discovery that it had been out of ammunition.

Casualties were so heavy that soldiers didn't dare make close friends. Petersen's only exception was Pace, his constant companion. Together the two men photographed the whole experience, with Pace wielding the camera and Petersen toting the film.

Supplies Outran

Mopping up sparse resistance in the north before attacking the main defense line, the American forces outran their supply lines and were forced to live off the land. Forced marches were grueling, and Petersen's weight dwindled from 190 to 155.

In a sense, Petersen owes his 30th anniversary steak and eggs to Pace. "I feel I owe my life to him," recalls Petersen, who at the time was an impulsive 20-year-old private. "I was more or less reckless; he was more mature," he says.

The 4th Marine Regiment was awarded the Presidential Unit Citation for its landing on Oroku Peninsula, outflanking and surrounding the Japanese defenses in the ten-day Battle for Oroku. The maneuver, expected by the enemy, cost the 4th Marines heavy casualties.

The 4th also had the distinction of being the first American unit to land on Japanese soil, and stood honor guard on the USS Missouri for the signing of the peace on V-J Day. The 4th Marines also reinstated the colors of their predecessors, the highly decorated original 4th, which had been captured at Corregidor three years earlier, had been captured at Corregidor three years earlier.

Opinions Differ On How To Reorganize Schools

Landis said he believes most education board members support reorganization, but have a "difference of opinion" on whether to accomplish it through legislative edict or voluntary cooperation.

'Best Framework'

State Education Commissioner Anne Campbell said, "My position has always been that we should provide the best possible framework within which to provide good educational programs."

"In order to accomplish many of those standards we will have to address very seriously the question of reorganization."

"I think it has to be done within the framework of the desires of local people, and what they want their schools to be."

Reorganization must also encompass school finance, she said, adding that in order to do required background work, both might not gain considerable attention until the nation's bicentennial.

The Legislature by then will "have to address itself to reducing the number of school districts," said Nebraska PTA President Mrs. Everett Dietz of Omaha. Otherwise, "it seems impossible to write a state aid to education bill that will be acceptable to every corner of the state and understood by the general public."

Belz Discusses Money

The NSEA's Belz also discussed the related finance issue: "Although a lot of those school districts are operated inexpensively from a taxpayer's point of view, when you look at actual costs per pupil, they are extremely expensive."

"The problem is, when decisions are made on the basis of taxation," rather than educational opportunity, the issue "gets confused," Belz said.

Maintaining local control is a theme of the Nebraska School Improvement Association of small schools.

NSIA Executive Secretary S. H. Brauer Jr. of Lincoln said: "These schools belong to the parents and the children who attend them, not the state," Brauer said. "When the time comes for reorganization, they and they alone should make that decision."

Opposition Is Adamant

Brauer said NSIA historically has "opposed any form of mandatory reorganization. And I anticipate we would vigorously oppose it in the future."

He said substandard schools are "the rare exceptions" in Nebraska. "I contend that if the Legislature had not passed a law a number of years ago which prohibited Class I districts from merging and reorganizing among themselves, those conditions would not exist."

Redistricting proponents are "very determined going at it," most visibly through the state board's hearings set in April on new rules and regulations for state approval of schools, he said.

"We'll challenge them in court, if they're ever adopted," Brauer promised, saying board members are intent on "forcing school districts out of existence that are presently authorized by law."

Nebraska once had more than 5,000 districts.

'Parents Lose Voice'

Brauer said if popular sentiment favored redistricting, "it would be done." Reorganizing districts, he said, has "invariably" eroded parents' voices in their children's education.

Brauer said the Legislature has already "removed" much local school management and control. He cited budgetary constraints and the 1975 passage of LB82, requiring a school board to show "just cause" for denying a teacher contract renewal.

"We are very slowly but surely losing any voice, whether through school board members or through parental control, in what's going on in our schools," Brauer said.

Updating Of Laws Called For

State Board of Education member Marilyn Fowler of Lexington has called again, in a letter to Gov. J. James Exon, for "revision of antiquated school laws."

Her three suggestions to the governor, and his responses:

First, Mrs. Fowler renewed her call for the 1976 Legislature to introduce a bill to allow only kindergarten-through-12th-grade (K12) districts in Nebraska by 1978.

She said all Class I districts (kindergarten through 6th or 8th grades only) should decide which K12 district they want to join.

Exon Sees Board Duty

Exon: "If the state school board feels that legislation should be introduced on any school matter, it's not only their prerogative but their obligation to do so."

"I certainly am not going to endorse in advance any proposal that they make," he said, but favored a law to give the State Education Department teeth in enforcing sanitary and instruction requirements.

Second, Mrs. Fowler said citizens should report any possible substandard schools to their county superintendent or the Education Department. Inspection of those schools should follow.

Governor Concurs

"I would concur with her recommendation," Exon said, although questioning the definition of "substandard" and again indicating that should be clarified in law.

Third, Mrs. Fowler asked the governor to suggest that the Education Department ask each county superintendent to file a report listing each school.

The list, she said, should verify whether the schools have a telephone, electricity, running water inspected for purity, indoor or outdoor toilets, the condition of sewage disposal systems, the type of heating used and inspection record, the condition of the school library and the copyright year of textbooks.

"The governor," Exon said, "has no direct relation with the county school superintendents." He said it is rather "the responsibility of the state school board and the State Department of Education to make such requests."

Extremes Seen

In her own research of Nebraska's 241 school districts, Mrs. Fowler concluded: "Our Nebraska public schools can become just about as bad as each local school district wants them to become (or) just about as good as each local district wants them to become."

"And it appears we are fostering the extremes."

"In general, I have been favorably impressed with the Nebraska public school system," an educator responsible for numerous schools in Nebraska's western half wrote Mrs. Fowler. "However, in traveling about the country (of Nebraska), I have seen these woefully inadequate schools serving sparsely populated areas. Some are so primitive that you believe you are living in another age."

According to 1973-74 statistics on school approval and accreditation, Mrs. Fowler said: — 923 districts were nonaccredited or nonapproved. — 281 districts were accredited. — 29 districts were "AA" accredited.

In the previous school year, "there were also 281 districts accredited," she wrote. "It would appear that there wasn't too much desire to improve, among the 923 districts."

No Penalty Exists

She said there is "no penalty for them when they become substandard," and the Education Department now has no authority to demand upgrading of textbooks or school facilities.

"Nebraska has carried the concept of local control so far," he said, that "in our fierce protection" of it, "we are preventing local control for the parents when children leave the Class I and enter a K12 district for junior high."

Thus, "a parent of a nonresident tuition student cannot vote for a school board member of the K12 or have any influence pertaining to policies, curriculum, etc."

Mrs. Fowler, mother of five children, said, "The only way a parent can improve offerings of a K12 district is to become part of that district."

"Nebraska can no longer tolerate a public school structure" that denies parents an equal voice in education, she said.

Teachers Underutilized

Mrs. Fowler also objected to outstanding teachers being forced to use inadequate teaching materials in substandard buildings. And "if we do have great teachers in schools with only a half dozen pupils, certainly we should be considering sharing their talents with a great many more pupils."

Moreover, "children coming from substandard schools pay the penalty when they must compete with their peer group," she said. "In Nebraska right now, there are 1,923 children who are in 'a class by themselves all day long.'"

"In a Class I district, this same child could go from kindergarten through the 8th grade without ever enjoying the company of a person his own age."

"How will this person learn to function with his fellow man?" Mrs. Fowler asked.

Buddies Remember Island War

By JOEL THORSON
Outstate Nebraska Bureau

Milford — Sometime Tuesday Milford realtor H. L. "Pete" Petersen will place a long-distance call to his old friend Denny Pace, a retired Los Angeles policeman now living in Texas.

Petersen will ask him whether he had steak and eggs for breakfast. If the answer is no, he'll ask Pace if he knows what day it is.

Chances are, though, Pace will remember that the two men ate steak and eggs together 30 years ago Tuesday morning before hitting the beach at Okinawa.

Both men were in the 2nd Battalion, 4th Marine Regiment, 6th Marine Division, an element of the 10th Army amphibious force that captured the last bastion of Japanese resistance in the Pacific after some of the bitterest and costliest fighting of World War II.

Scranton, Pa.

The Okinawa campaign will be commemorated in August, when veterans of the 6th Marine Division reunite in Scranton, Pa., for four days of reminiscence. Petersen doubts that anyone he knows will be there and figures his phone call to Pace will suffice.

It was Easter Sunday, April 1st, 1945, the morning of the assault, and the American forces wondered if some kind of April Fool's joke were being played when no

Japanese resistance was encountered on the beach.

In reality, the Japanese were staking everything on an interior defense line protecting the southern end of the strategic island and its capital, Naha. Entrenched with their backs to the wall, just 400 miles from their home islands, the Japanese fought ferociously when the time came.

7,283 Americans Killed

In fact, when the smoke cleared 82 days later, 7,283 American soldiers had lost their lives and 31,398 had been injured. Of 27 men in Petersen's squad, only he, Pace and four others came through unscathed. "It was very treacherous," he says.

By comparison, Petersen says, the desperate Japanese suffered an appalling loss of over 130,000 lives, sometimes "making charges into certain death" to defend the key island in their nation's inner defense perimeter.

On one occasion, pinned down by artillery fire, Petersen recalls knowing with finality that he was about to die — before finding cover under a precipice. Another time, he says, he backed down rifle-armed Japanese soldiers with only a handgun, later to make the unnerving discovery that it had been out of ammunition.

Casualties were so heavy that soldiers didn't dare make close friends. Petersen's only exception was Pace, his constant companion. Together the two men photographed the whole experience, with Pace wielding the camera and Petersen toting the film.

Supplies Outrun

Mopping up sparse resistance in the north before attacking the main defense line, the American forces outran their supply lines and were forced to live off the land. Forced marches were grueling, and Petersen's weight dwindled from 190 to 155.

In a sense, Petersen owes his 30th anniversary steak and eggs to Pace. "I feel I owe my life to him," recalls Petersen, who at the time was an impulsive 20-year-old private. "I was more or less reckless; he was more mature," he says.

The 4th Marine Regiment was awarded the Presidential Unit Citation for its landing on Oroku Peninsula, outflanking and surrounding the Japanese defenses in the ten-day Battle for Oroku. The maneuver, expected by the enemy, cost the 4th Marines heavy casualties.

The 4th also had the distinction of being the first American unit to land on Japanese soil, and stood honor guard on the USS Missouri for the signing of the peace on V-J Day. The 4th Marines also reinstated the colors of their predecessors, the highly decorated original 4th, which had been captured at Corregidor three years earlier. He had been captured at Corregidor three years earlier.

Opinions Differ On How To Reorganize Schools

Landis said he believes most education board members support reorganization, but have a "difference of opinion" on whether to accomplish it through legislative edict or voluntary cooperation.

'Best Framework'

State Education Commissioner Anne Campbell said, "My position has always been that we should provide the best possible framework within which to provide good educational programs."

"In order to accomplish many of those standards we will have to address very seriously the question of reorganization."

"I think it has to be done within the framework of the

Police Arrest Jews

New York (AP) — Police arrested 22 members of the Jewish Defense League and charged them with tossing containers of red paint onto the walls of the Soviet mission to the United Nations.

Extremes Seen

In her own research of Nebraska's 1,241 school districts, Mrs. Fowler concluded: "Our Nebraska public schools can become just about as bad as each local school district wants them to become (or) just about as good as each local district wants them to become."

"And it appears we are fostering the extremes."

"In general, I have been favorably impressed with the Nebraska public school system," an educator responsible for numerous schools in Nebraska's western half wrote Mrs. Fowler. "However, in traveling about the country (of Nebraska), I have seen these woefully inadequate schools serving sparsely populated areas. Some are so primitive that you believe you are living in another age."

According to 1973-74 statistics on school approval and accreditation, Mrs. Fowler said: — 923 districts were nonaccredited or nonapproved. — 281 districts were accredited. — 29 districts were "AA" accredited.

In the previous school year, "there were also 281 districts accredited," she wrote. "It would appear that there wasn't too much desire to improve, among the 923 districts."

Mums Suggested For Blossoming Gardeners

By DOMINICK COSTELLO
Farm Editor

Gardeners are blossoming out everywhere in an effort to cut down on food prices, but there are also new blossoms to put in your garden so you can add beauty to the food.

Most places that sell radish and bean seeds can supply you with chrysanthemum plants. This year there are some very special and pretty new varieties to plant.

Chrysanthemums bloom in the fall and if given good care will usually survive through the winter to produce a larger plant with even more blossoms in succeeding years.

Free Booklet

Most garden stores have some sort of pamphlet on growing mums. One of the best booklets which has been free for years will no longer be available after this year.

Then's Garden Mums, 4815 Oak St., Crystal Lake, Ill., 60014, has published a free booklet that covers all aspects of mum growing and care. You can still get a copy by writing to the company this year but printing costs have made the free booklet an impossible giveaway program for the company after 1975 or whenever their present supply runs out.

A special bicentennial collection of mums developed for 1976 includes 13 new and beautiful varieties, one for each of the 13 original states.

Some of these varieties are available now including Concord, a pure light brown flower 2 1/2 to 3 inches wide.

Lexington is a large clear light pink flower up to 3 1/2 inches wide.

Pilgrim is a low growing dark red flower of a smaller size grown on plants that reach only 15 inches tall when fully grown.

Revere is a large mound cushion type up to 20 inches tall with a clear white flower 2 to 2 1/2 inches in diameter and fully double. One of the earliest blooming mums, Revere should bloom around Sept. 10.

Iroquois is a creamy peach color in the center with broad lavender pink petals that are long and fish hook tipped. The flower size will reach 7 1/2 inches on a tall plant that flowers about the middle of October.

Flowers of this type are referred to as spider varieties and are generally late bloomers. Frost protection, however, will usually allow the production of beautiful flowers from these plants.

England too grows mums with some lovely varieties available from H. Shoesmith Ltd. of Woking, England, available from a number of American companies.

Large Fluffy Sunset

Sunset is a large fluffy kind of deep yellow flower that often exceeds 6 inches in size.

White Dove is even larger, often exceeding 7 inches in size. The flowers are white to light cream and bloom in early October.

Cardinal is a dark red flower that tends to turn to a bronze red after blooming. Star-Bright is a large yellow flower that produces 6-inch blooms in October.

A row of chrysanthemums can make Indian summer seem like spring with new flowers just before winter closes down your garden growing season.

Governor Says Many Cattle Lost

Gov. J. James Exon said late Sunday it was almost impossible to realize the disaster brought on by a spring blizzard in western Nebraska without having seen it.

He spoke of extensive cattle losses, especially in the northwest Nebraska area, which was smacked the hardest.

"I had reports today of one rancher having severe losses in spring calves," he said. "Another report came from a man who said he lost about a quarter of his herd of 200 cows."

Many of the calves and yearlings were hardest hit, he said, while other authorities said the losses might run into the many hundreds as spring is normally the calving period.

Otherwise, he said, most of the state highways are open. He saluted Tom Boyle, director of State Patrol, for doing a "great job" in seeing to it that the roads were reopened.

Exon said, "What we need now is for ranchers and farmers, who have suffered losses in cattle, to report the same to their state Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation offices, their county commissioners and even to the governor's office."

"We need these reports so we can establish the criteria for a possible federal disaster relief request from the federal government, which if allowed would authorize low interest loans in many instances."

"It is a little hard for those who have not actually seen the disaster area to realize the situation in western and northwestern Nebraska," he concluded.

Spotlight on Agriculture

By DOMINICK COSTELLO
Farm Editor

Farmers and city folks both need to know that the so-called target prices on grains don't cover soybeans at all, and the feed grain crops it does cover are limited to those acreages included under the old farm allotment program.

If farmers plant more wheat, corn, barley or rye than the old restrictive farm program allotment, they do so at a risk that is totally their own.

The loan rates are well below the cost of producing grain on farms today even if you include only the out-of-pocket cost the farmer faces, such as taxes, fuel, fertilizer, seed, chemicals and harvesting costs.

Every farmer in the U.S. has a set allotment for various crops or his farm.

These can change as he buys or sells land or operates land for different landowners.

These problems will make a visit with your local county Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service office an essential part of your spring planning system.

One of the interesting side effects of using herbicides to control weeds in pastures in range areas is that the herbicides sometimes increase the protein content of grass and reduce damage from drought.

The application seems to work better on warm season grasses than on cool season grasses. Some valuable cool (spring and fall) season grasses are killed out by the herbicides. More research in range areas with cattle are required, but it looks promising as a regular rangeland practice.

The Lower Loup Natural Resources District has 188,000 trees on order for planting in 1975.

Tree planting is going on in all parts of the state under various programs by the NRDs, Forestry Department and those individuals who are putting in fruit trees and nut trees for their own use this year.

We are a long way from major lumber industry but there is a surprising amount of lumbering activity in the state at that.

If you are interested in selling logs for lumber you should contact the University of Nebraska department of forestry. It has a newsletter called Timber Talks that will run ads for your trees and tells you where to buy wood goods.

Pork producers are being warned not to jump in to expand hog production if prices rise as a result of recent cuts in hog production.

Gerald Beatty, national president of the pork producers, is from Sumner, Neb., also raises cattle and doesn't want to see the hog industry get into the same sad state the cattle industry is in now.

The U.S. Beef Breeds Council is asking purebred breeders to shrink their herds by 10% in the next six months.

The sale price of registered beef cattle has dropped alarmingly as commercial breeders of ordinary cattle have cut back on purchases of bulls and top grade females to improve their herds.

Edward Shean, a wheat farmer near Spearville, Kan., plowed down more than $3,000 worth of wheat in an effort to increase prices of wheat. He hopes other farmers will follow his example so wheat farmers won't end up like cattlemen with overpopulation and low prices.

A survey of 50 underdeveloped countries by the U.S. Department of Agriculture indicates they themselves are responsible for many of their food shortage problems due to poor policies that tend to discourage farmers from producing.

They cite price controls at producer and consumer levels, procurement of commodities by the government, export controls, export taxes, subsidized imports, credit restrictions and transportation restrictions as factors involved in poor food production.

I would agree that this is all too true in many nations, but the USDA, while calling for plantings from fence row to fence row, is itself engaged in some export controls which admittedly are being forced on a reluctant Earl Butz by the consumer-dominated Congress.

It is just possible they want us to notice the problem we have with nonfarmers making farm policy and realize we too have these same food restrictions that discourage farmers from producing more.

At any rate, for this nation to cite other nations' restrictions on farmers is clearly a case of the kettle calling the pot black.

Kearney Industry Promotes Beef

Kearney (AP) — A Kearney industry has begun a major advertising program coupled with a rebate program for the firm's employees for the purchase of beef.

The industry is Ace Irrigation and Manufacturing Co., which manufactures aluminum irrigation pipe.

Ace employees making beef purchases of $75 or more will receive a $25 rebate, while those buying four quarters or more will receive $50.

Lynn Thomas, owner of the firm, said persons were asking why an irrigation manufacturer was using his advertising dollars this way.

"My business depends on agriculture, so do a lot of businesses around here, maybe all of them, directly or indirectly," he said.

Ace Irrigation has had two years with more orders than could be filled, which has built up advertising dollars.

Thomas explained, "It seemed to me we could find a way to make good use of that money."

He said after talking to area feeders he found some had lost hundreds of thousands of dollars since the fall of 1973. He said he feels the success or failure in one part of the agricultural field will eventually affect all other parts of the farm economy.

"The only way we'll ever really push up the beef price is to eat our way out of the cattle surplus," Thomas said.

Cycle Crash Claims Two

Plattsburgh (UPI) — A car-motorcycle accident at a street intersection here claimed its second life Sunday.

Keith Griffith, 17, Plattsburgh, died late Sunday at an Omaha hospital of injuries suffered in the Saturday night mishap.

Marlin Knoell, 16, Murray, was killed outright.

Police Chief Don Schneider said Knoell was operating a motorcycle on which Griffith was a passenger when it was in collision with a car driven by Todd Porter, 16, Plattsburgh. Porter escaped injury.

Schneider said the northbound Porter car was making a turn and was hit broadside by the southbound motorcycle. Both Knoell and Griffith were thrown 15 to 30 feet by the impact, he said.

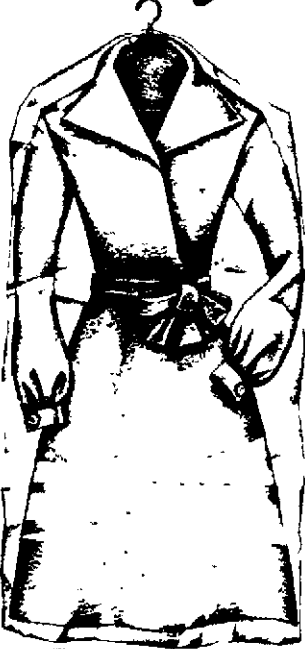

The chief said no charges had been filed, but the investigation was continuing.

Bruning Dies In 1-Car Accident

Omaha (AP) — James K. Bruning, 37, of Springfield was killed Friday in a one-car accident about 3 1/2 miles south of Omaha on Highway 50.

The State Patrol said Bruning was alone in a southbound auto that went off the highway into a ditch and rolled.

Weekly Grain Report

By DOMINICK COSTELLO
Farm Editor

Farmers who are threatening to hold land out of production are making some believers in the grain futures market but apparently none yet in the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA).

Prices may rise a bit now that the speculators think farmers will cut back acreage. Higher prices could lead to greater plantings. Farmers tend to go by the prices the day they plant rather than by what they might reasonably expect to get for their crop at harvest time.

Secretary of Agriculture Earl Butz has issued a statement saying, in effect, that without government incentives to keep land out of production farmers will never cut back on production.

College Trustees Ask New Ruling On Chase Case

The State College Board of Trustees has asked the Nebraska Supreme Court to overturn a Lancaster County District Court decision and uphold the board's decision to fire a Chadron State College professor.

The state college board said in a brief filed with the court that a statute requiring a majority of the board members to fire a teacher does not apply to state college professors.

At a May 24, 1974 meeting, attended by four of the seven board members, the trustees voted three to one to fire Dudley H. Chase. The board fired Chase because it wanted to end the foreign language program at Chadron.

The Lancaster County District Court said Chase was not actually fired because the three members voting against him were not a majority of the seven-member board.

Farmers have, however, cut back sharply on cattle in feedlots and the number of hogs they are producing because the price is too low to justify producing them.

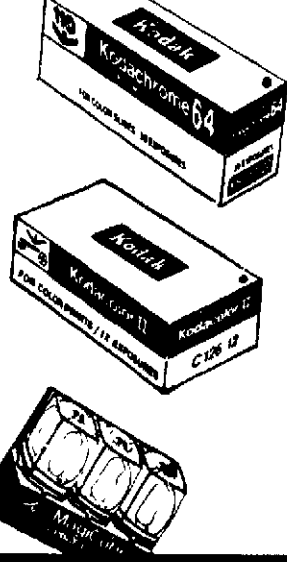

If enough farmers think grain prices will be below the cost of production, it would seem logical they would also cut down on the amount they produce.

One key factor in the cutback situation is the action Congress and the administration take in setting up a new farm program.

Not only the law itself — if it does become law — but the new regulations that USDA issues once the legislative issue is settled will control how much land farmers will plant to crops.

The other factor is the weather. Crop production estimates made by USDA while seed is still in the sack have to be a high-risk guess that may not materialize. Too much or too little rain can prevent farmers from planting, growing or harvesting most anytime throughout the 1975 crop year — in some part of the nation or in all of it.

Kearney (AP) — A Kearney industry has begun a major advertising program coupled with a rebate program for the firm's employees for the purchase of beef.

The industry is Ace Irrigation and Manufacturing Co., which manufactures aluminum irrigation pipe.

Ace employees making beef purchases of $75 or more will receive a $25 rebate, while those buying four quarters or more will receive $50.

Lynn Thomas, owner of the firm, said persons were asking why an irrigation manufacturer was using his advertising dollars this way.

"My business depends on agriculture, so do a lot of businesses around here, maybe all of them, directly or indirectly," he said.

Ace Irrigation has had two years with more orders than could be filled, which has built up advertising dollars.

Thomas explained, "It seemed to me we could find a way to make good use of that money."

He said after talking to area feeders he found some had lost hundreds of thousands of dollars since the fall of 1973. He said he feels the success or failure in one part of the agricultural field will eventually affect all other parts of the farm economy.

"The only way we'll ever really push up the beef price is to eat our way out of the cattle surplus," Thomas said.

Cycle Crash Claims Two

Plattsburgh (UPI) — A car-motorcycle accident at a street intersection here claimed its second life Sunday.

Keith Griffith, 17, Plattsburgh, died late Sunday at an Omaha hospital of injuries suffered in the Saturday night mishap.

Marlin Knoell, 16, Murray, was killed outright. Police Chief Don Schneider said Knoell was operating a motorcycle on which Griffith was a passenger when it was in collision with a car driven by Todd Porter, 16, Plattsburgh. Porter escaped injury.

Schneider said the northbound Porter car was making a turn and was hit broadside by the southbound motorcycle. Both Knoell and Griffith were thrown 15 to 30 feet by the impact, he said.

The chief said no charges had been filed, but the investigation was continuing.

Bruning Dies In 1-Car Accident

Omaha (AP) — James K. Bruning, 37, of Springfield was killed Friday in a one-car accident about 3½ miles south of Omaha on Highway 50.

The State Patrol said Bruning was alone in a southbound auto that went off the highway into a ditch and rolled.

Governor Says Many Cattle Lost

Gov. J. James Exon said late Sunday it was almost impossible to realize the disaster brought on by a spring blizzard in western Nebraska without having seen it.

He spoke of extensive cattle losses, especially in the northwest Nebraska area, which was smacked the hardest.

"I had reports today of one rancher having severe losses in spring calves," he said. "Another report came from a man who said he lost about a quarter of his herd of 200 cows."

Many of the calves and yearlings were hardest hit, he said, while other authorities said the losses might run into the many hundreds as spring is normally the calving period.

Otherwise, he said, most of the state highways are open. He saluted Tom Boyle, director of State Patrol, for doing a "great job" in seeing to it that the roads were reopened.

Exon said, "What we need now is for ranchers and farmers, who have suffered losses in cattle, to report the same to their state Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation offices, their county commissioners and even to the governor's office."

"We need these reports so we can establish the criteria for a possible federal disaster relief request from the federal government, which if allowed would authorize low interest loans in many instances."

"It is a little hard for those who have not actually seen the disaster area to realize the situation in western and northwestern Nebraska," he concluded.

Weekly Grain Report

By DOMINICK COSTELLO
Farm Editor

Farmers who are threatening to hold land out of production are making some believers in the grain futures market but apparently none yet in the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA).

Prices may rise a bit now that the speculators think farmers will cut back acreage. Higher prices could lead to greater plantings. Farmers tend to go by the prices the day they plant rather than by what they might reasonably expect to get for their crop at harvest time.

Secretary of Agriculture Earl Butz has issued a statement saying, in effect, that without government incentives to keep land out of production farmers will never cut back on production.

College Trustees Ask New Ruling On Chase Case

The State College Board of Trustees has asked the Nebraska Supreme Court to overturn a Lancaster County District Court decision and uphold the board's decision to fire a Chadron State College professor.

The state college board said in a brief filed with the court that a statute requiring a majority of the board members to fire a teacher does not apply to state college professors.

At a May 24, 1974 meeting, attended by four of the seven board members, the trustees voted three to one to fire Dudley H. Chase. The board fired Chase because it wanted to end the foreign language program at Chadron.

The Lancaster County District Court said Chase was not actually fired because the three members voting against him were not a majority of the seven-member board.

Farmers have, however, cut back sharply on cattle in feedlots and the number of hogs they are producing because the price is too low to justify producing them.

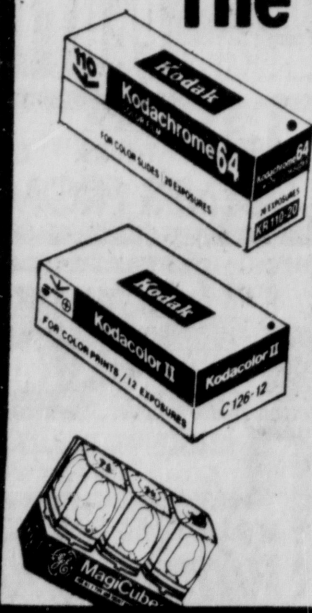

If enough farmers think grain prices will be below the cost of production, it would seem logical they would also cut down on the amount they produce.

One key factor in the cutback situation is the action Congress and the administration take in setting up a new farm program.

Not only the law itself — if it does become law — but the new regulations that USDA issues once the legislative issue is settled will control how much land farmers will plant to crops.

The other factor is the weather. Crop production estimates made by USDA while seed is still in the sack have to be a high-risk guess that may not materialize. Too much or too little rain can prevent farmers from planting, growing or harvesting most any time throughout the 1975 crop year — in some part of the nation or in all of it.

40% Of LNE Seniors Jobless

Not only is the job picture bleak for high school students seeking part-time employment, it doesn't appear very promising for graduating high school seniors seeking full-time jobs.

According to a survey conducted last week at Lincoln Northeast High, about 40% of the approximately 550 graduating seniors have no full-time employment lined up for after graduation.

In a questionnaire filled out by the seniors, 40% indicated a need for help in finding a full-time job after graduation.

According to Allen Blezek, career education coordinator for the Lincoln Public Schools, about 23% indicated that they have employment lined up.

He said there are usually fewer seniors looking for jobs by this time of year, while the number of seniors planning to go on to some higher education has decreased significantly.

The survey, Blezek said, showed that only 34% plan to go on to school after graduation.

This is a sizeable drop from the nearly 50% of the Lincoln Northeast graduating seniors who usually go on to college or pursue some other type of higher education after high school, he said.

The survey also showed that about 3% are planning to enter military service after graduation.

By GERRY SWITZER
Star Staff Writer

If you think jobs are scarce these days, imagine what it's like for teenagers.

Counselors at Lincoln schools say that more youths than ever are looking for jobs, but the jobs just aren't there.

As a result, many report, inquiries about military opportunities are up sharply over recent years.

Don Darnell of Southeast High School said that the school has invited military recruiters to the April Career Day for the first time in years.

Students are also looking into the Reserve Officer Training Program in college, Darnell said.

Counselors at other schools report much the same trend, noting that students are interested in getting job training without out-of-pocket costs plus other fringe benefits like the GI Bill and home loans when they get out.

Sgt. 1C Jim Dolley, who is in charge of the Army recruiting office in Lincoln, said many are joining the military because of the benefits involved—choosing a vocation, receiving training and being able to select where they live and work.

He said many young people don't like to put a financial burden on their parents and the military "offers a more independent opportunity for young people."

The most common explanation for the new interest in the military is the state of the economy, more specifically, the lack of jobs.

Job opportunities for young people between the ages of 14 and 18 are "scarce," according to Robin McCleery of Youth Employment Service (YES).

She said YES has about half as many requests by employers for help as it had at this time a year ago.

There is a backlog of about 2,000 students still looking for jobs, she said. "We hope things will get better by summer," she said, noting that YES has had no requests by employers as yet for summer jobs.

Ed Schwartzkopf, work study supervisor for the Lincoln Public Schools, said that Lincoln has been fortunate in the past in being able to accommodate most of the job needs of young people.

However, he said, "when things get tough, it may push some of the youngsters to the outer edges."

Allen Blezek, career education coordinator for the Lincoln Public Schools with primary responsibilities at Lincoln Northeast, said that "we're up against a wall for part-time jobs for students."

"I don't think the picture looks too bright," he said, noting that he had a list of job openings to work from at this time last year but has had very few requests for help this year.

Because many of the usual employers of students have not been contacting the schools as they have in the past, Blezek said he had contacted them.

However, they either don't have openings or are increasing hours of present employees, he said.

Blezek said many students show concern about parents being temporarily unemployed and their inability to get part-time jobs to help out.

He said that the schools try to match the interests of the students with a job, but because of the economic situation, many students are more receptive to whatever is available "because they know things aren't as smooth as they were."

Although jobs were still available last fall, "things gradually got stiffer as the school year progressed," said Bob Ruyter, counselor in the Work-Study program in the four Lincoln high schools.

"More kids are asking for help, and we're not able to place them," he said, adding that about twice as many students are seeking work and "we have nothing to offer them."

"I think it's really going to be a problem," he said, adding that many students who come from families who have had good incomes in the past are now seeking employment.

"The picture has even changed in the last couple of weeks," Ruyter said, citing that students will accept jobs like washing dishes because they need employment.

The minimum wage situation has affected some of the potential jobs for students because employers want to get the most out of the price being paid employees, Ruyter said.

"We have a backlog of people desperate and destitute for jobs," Darrell Grell, counselor at Lincoln High School, said.

"It's kind of frustrating when we can't fill the demands of students," he said, adding that although many want jobs to support a car, not as many are owning cars as were.

He said there is a concern now about job location and transportation to and from employment because the cost of owning and maintaining a car is prohibitive for many students.

"It's a matter of using the folks' cars and helping with the cost of gas," he said.

In the past, many families had two or three cars, Grell said, noting that "this is tough on gas so there is a need for students to go out and work."

Few Youths To Work In Parks

The Youth Conservation Corps (YCC) program is attracting much interest among high school students who are seeking employment, according to school counselors.

The program, which will employ about 28 teenagers to work and learn at Wilderness Park and the Chet Ager Nature Center, operated in Lincoln for the first time last year.

According to Dr. Esther Bennett, park naturalist for the City Parks and Recreation Department, the work-learning experience will provide 44 days of work at $12.60 per day for students who are accepted.

Applications for the session which begins June 9 and runs through Aug. 8 must be in by May 1, and selection of students will be completed by May 15.

Dr. Bennett said that students involved in the program last year woodchipped trails through Wilderness Park, did some staining and painting work as well as general maintenance.

It is hoped there will be some individual projects such as counting deer in Wilderness Park and doing plant studies this year, she said.

Camps will also be operated in Chadron and McCook with those enrollees working on outdoor projects in the Nebraska National Forest and at reservoirs around McCook.

The program, which is federally funded through the National Forest Service and Bureau of Reclamation, received 50% federal funds and 50% local funds last year.

Bridge Bid Can Backfire

By B. JAY BECKER

Doria opened the bidding with a heart and Desrousseaux overcalled with a notrump! This type of overcall with a long suit and a weak hand is known in France as the comic notrump (le sans atout comique). Bufile doubled to show a very good hand and Theron added some spice to the goings-on by leaping to five clubs.

Doria bid five hearts, thus indicating much more than a minimum opening bid, and Bufile raised him to six hearts. Perhaps Theron should have passed — the bidding unquestionably would have died then and there — but he bid seven clubs as a sacrifice against the small slam he felt sure the opponents could make.

This tactic backfired when it gave Doria a chance to make a forcing pass and in that way invite his partner to go on to seven hearts with a suitable hand. The pass was very descriptive, for had Doria held a weaker hand he would have doubled in order to stop partner from bidding a grand slam.

Bufile had no real problem, under the circumstances. He realized that his three aces, facing a forcing pass, were exactly the kind of medicine Doria needed for a grand slam. So he bid seven hearts, which South easily made for a score of 2,210 points, and the comic notrump did not prove to be so comic after all.

Valentine Quite A Surprise

DEAR ABBY: My husband sent a mushy valentine to a girl, and on the bottom of it he wrote: "I love you, Baby!" He must have put the wrong address on the envelope because it came back with "ADDRESS UNKNOWN" on it.

Naturally I was curious when I saw this big, fancy looking envelope addressed to some name I had never heard of in my life in my husband's handwriting, with his return address on the back, so I opened it, and when I saw what it was, I nearly fainted!

Should I confront him with it, or forget it?

BROOKLYN WIFE
DEAR WIFE: Forget it. If "Baby" thinks he forgot her on Valentine's Day, it might be the beginning of the end. Which would be better for all three of you, since he's married to you.

DEAR ABBY: I have recently started to give private piano lessons to young children, and I am planning my first recital.

Since most of my students' parents have never heard me play, would it be all right for me to play a number or two myself on the program? Or do you think it would be considered showing off on my part?

Maybe an experienced piano teacher has the answer.

PERPLEXED PIANIST
DEAR PERPLEXED: Maybe. And I would welcome their letters. My experience is limited to my own violin recitals. My instructor, Leo Kucinski, a very talented violinist in his own right, did not perform at the recitals of his pupils. But in retrospect, perhaps he should have. He would have inspired his pupils, and entertained their parents.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 54-year-old widower. I had a very good 33-year marriage with my one and only wife. I met a woman a few months ago, and we became very much attracted to each other. She is 44, and we are talking marriage, but there is something in the back of my mind that bothers me.

This woman has been married three times before. She was divorced from her first husband, and her second and third committed suicide. I have a feeling that if she couldn't make a success of three marriages that must be something wrong with her.

What do you think?
DEAR HAVING: Don't jump to any conclusions. Get to know her better, and judge her for yourself.

Maybe an experienced piano teacher has the answer.

PERPLEXED PIANIST

DEAR PERPLEXED: Maybe. And I would welcome their letters. My experience is limited to my own violin recitals. My instructor, Leo Kucinski, a very talented violinist in his own right, did not perform at the recitals of his pupils. But in retrospect, perhaps he should have. He would have inspired his pupils, and entertained their parents.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 54-year-old widower. I had a very good 33-year marriage with my one and only wife. I met a woman a few months ago, and we became very much attracted to each other. She is 44, and we are talking marriage, but there is something in the back of my mind that bothers me.

This woman has been married three times before. She was divorced from her first husband, and her second and third committed suicide. I have a feeling that if she couldn't make a success of three marriages that must be something wrong with her.

What do you think?

DEAR HAVING: Don't jump to any conclusions. Get to know her better, and judge her for yourself.

First Rebate To Early Bird

From Press Reports
Washington — Early-bird taxpayers will be rewarded with the first rebate checks issued under the tax cut law signed by President Ford, the Internal Revenue Service said Sunday.
An IRS spokesman said there would be little difficulty or cost implementing the rebate plan since the IRS anticipated approval of some kind of tax cut measure and programmed its computers accordingly some time ago.
The first tax returns to run through the computers for rebate purposes will be for those persons who filed early, many of whom have already received a refund check. They can expect to receive a check for $98 to $200 by mid-May, the IRS said.
Returns filed close to the April 15 deadline will probably receive a single check combining any refund they were entitled to plus the rebate. The check may not reach the mailbox until June.
Ford signed the $24.8 billion measure after a firm declaration that he was "drawing the line" at any bigger deficit than the $60 billion one now expected. Ford said the bill reached the upper limit of allowable tax cuts.

Kissinger To Remain On The Job

©The New York Times
Palm Springs, Calif. — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger and President Ford decided in a private meeting in the White House last Wednesday that Kissinger would continue in his office "at least for the remainder of the President's term," the White House press secretary, Ron Nessen, said Sunday.
Nessen made the statement in response to a question whether the President was considering replacing Kissinger now that the agreement of two years on the war in Indochina seemed to be coming apart. There had been rumors — even before the situation in South Vietnam began to deteriorate with the loss of northern provinces — that Kissinger might resign at the end of this year instead of remaining until the President's term expires in January, 1977, if he is not re-elected.

Major provisions include:
— A 10% refund of 1974 taxes up to a maximum of $200 and with a minimum of $100 except for persons who paid less than $100, who would get back all the taxes they paid.
— An increase in the standard deduction for 1975 for persons who do not itemize on their tax returns.
— A $30 tax credit on 1975 taxes for every taxpayer and each additional personal exemption claimed.
— A 1975 earned income tax credit to help compensate the working poor for the Social Security taxes they pay.
— A tax credit of 10% of earned income up to $400 for working families with children whose income is less than $8,000.
— Special tax credits for buyers of new homes of 5% of the purchase price up to $2,000.
— Increases in deductions allowed for child care for working parents.
— Investment tax credits of 10% for businesses to help spur investment in new machinery.
— An additional 13 weeks of unemployment benefits for hard-core jobless areas.
— A $50 payment to persons on Social Security, railroad retirement and aid to the blind, aged and disabled.
— Repeal of the oil depletion allowance for major firms.
— Changes in foreign tax credits for businesses.

Camp Kiwanis Benefit Dance Collects $300

A Saturday night benefit dance for the Easter Seal's Camp Kiwanis near Milford brought in about $300, according to Franklin Manning of the Pony Express Riders, the sponsoring organization. Manning expects more proceeds to come in during the week.
The Pony Express Riders of Nebraska is a statewide group of horsemen who raise money for the handicapped. The Salt Creek Wranglers, Nebraska Scouts, Capitol City Horse Club and Sheriff's Posse planned the dance at the National Guard Armory.
State saddle clubs and 4-H groups plan to ride in a parade downtown Lincoln beginning 1 p.m. April 19. The riders will go to Milford for a parade and barbecue.

Homebuyer Has Tax, Price Help

WASHINGTON (AP) — Buyers of new homes not only get a tax break from the law signed Saturday by President Ford, but they also get help on obtaining the best price.
The law provides a 5 per cent tax credit on the purchase price of new homes with a maximum credit of $2,000.
And to keep the sellers from simply jacking up the price because of that credit, the law requires that the sale be made at the lowest price at which the new house was ever offered for sale.
To claim the tax credit a homebuyer will have to attach to his tax return a certificate from the seller that the home was sold at the lowest price.
If this certification is false the seller may be prosecuted and the homebuyer is entitled to recover an amount equal to three times the difference between the purchase price and the previous lower offered price.
The tax credit provided by this measure is different from a tax deduction in that the credit can be subtracted from the taxes that otherwise would be payable. Congress has estimated that the total credits under the bill amount to $600 million. The credit applies to new homes, mobile homes and living units in condominiums and cooperative housing projects. The home must have been under construction prior to March 26 of this year and the purchase made or agreed to between March 12 and Dec. 31.
People building their own homes can claim the credit for homes built in 1976 as well.
The homebuyer must be the first occupant of the house to qualify for the credit, and it must be his principal place of residence. The purchase of a summer home, for example, would not qualify.
The legislation also provides that the seller of a home has 18 months in which to purchase a new principal place of residence without having to pay tax on any profit earned on the sale. Previously the time limit was 12 months.
If the taxpayer builds the home, the period is extended from 18 to 24 months.

11 Persons Shot Dead, Man Held

HAMILTON, Ohio (AP) — Eleven persons, including seven children, were shot to death in a two-story house here, police said Sunday night.
Police said they had taken one man into custody for questioning.
The bodies of seven children, three women and a man were found Sunday in the house on the south side of Hamilton, about 30 miles north of Cincinnati, police said.
All had been shot in the head except for a woman shot in the chest, police said.
The coroner indicated there was no sign of a struggle in the house occupied by a woman identified as Charity Ruppert, whom neighbors said was in her 60s and lived alone.
Three pistols were found in the living room of the home and a rifle was found leaning against a refrigerator in the kitchen. Spent shells were found in both rooms, police said.
Police declined to speculate on the nature of the shootings.
Police Chief George McNally termed the scene "a bloody mess."

Dynamite Trap In Car Kills Crime Figure

Cleveland (UPI) — Police said Sunday it appeared as many of 10 sticks of dynamite were in the booby trap that killed underworld figure Alex (Shondor) Birns when he tried to start his car.
A number of detectives said they feared another gang war might erupt over Birns' death, either for control of his numbers empire or for revenge.
"He was the last of the white guys who headed the rackets here and whoever had him wasted had it done by a professional," a police officer said. "This definitely cost somebody a lot of dough — at least $20,000 — to get rid of Shondor. But I'm surprised he lasted this long."
Birns, a mean street fighter with a penchant for flashy clothes and lovely women, was killed when his luxury car exploded seconds after he got inside.

Maxey Suggests Workshops Held To Boost Input

Jo Ann Maxey, Lincoln School Board candidate, suggested Sunday the board sponsor workshops on community issues to increase parent and student input into the school system.
Workshops on issues including drugs, sex education, curriculum planning and school counseling would demonstrate a concern "for the students who are not being reached by current programs," she said.
"School concerns are community concerns," she said, "and just as it is important to have citizen involvement in city planning, greater community involvement in educational goals will help the school board meet the needs of all students."

Death Of Man, 64, Said Suicide

A Mead man died at Bryan Memorial Hospital Sunday morning of an apparently self-inflicted gunshot wound, according to police reports.
Police said Charles Gustafson, 64, shot himself with a .22 caliber rifle while visiting his son at 5231 S. 51st.

First Rebate To Early Bird

From Press Reports
Washington — Early-bird taxpayers will be rewarded with the first rebate checks issued under the tax cut law signed by President Ford, the Internal Revenue Service said Sunday.

An IRS spokesman said there would be little difficulty or cost implementing the rebate plan since the IRS anticipated approval of some kind of tax cut measure and programmed its computers accordingly some time ago.

Camp Kiwanis Benefit Dance Collects $300

A Saturday night benefit dance for the Easter Seal's Camp Kiwanis near Milford brought in about $300, according to Franklin Manning of the Pony Express Riders, the sponsoring organization. Manning expects more proceeds to come in during the week.

The Pony Express Riders of Nebraska is a statewide group of horsemen who raise money for the handicapped. The Salt Creek Wranglers, Nebraska Scouts, Capitol City Horse Club and Sheriff's Posse planned the dance at the National Guard Armory.

State saddle clubs and 4-H groups plan to ride in a parade downtown Lincoln beginning 1 p.m. April 19. The riders will go to Milford for a parade and barbecue.

Homebuyer Has Tax, Price Help

WASHINGTON (AP) — Buyers of new homes not only get a tax break from the law signed Saturday by President Ford, but they also get help on obtaining the best price.

The law provides a 5 per cent tax credit on the purchase price of new homes with a maximum credit of $2,000.

And to keep the sellers from simply jacking up the price because of that credit, the law requires that the sale be made at the lowest price at which the new house was ever offered for sale.

To claim the tax credit a homebuyer will have to attach to his tax return a certificate from the seller that the home was sold at the lowest price.

If this certification is false the seller may be prosecuted and the homebuyer is entitled to recover an amount equal to three times the difference between the purchase price and the previous lower offered price.

The tax credit provided by this measure is different from a tax deduction in that the credit can be subtracted from the taxes that otherwise would be payable. Congress has estimated that the total credits under the bill amount to $600 million.

The credit applies to new homes, mobile homes and living units in condominiums and cooperative housing projects. The home must have been under construction prior to March 26 of this year and the purchase made or agreed to between March 12 and Dec. 31.

People building their own homes can claim the credit for homes built in 1976 as well.

The homebuyer must be the first occupant of the house to qualify for the credit, and it must be his principal place of residence. The purchase of a summer home, for example, would not qualify.

The legislation also provides that the seller of a home has 18 months in which to purchase a new principal place of residence without having to pay tax on any profit earned on the sale. Previously the time limit was 12 months.

If the taxpayer builds the home, the period is extended from 18 to 24 months.

Santa Monica, Calif. (UPI) — Television talk show host Johnny Carson has filed a suit seeking $38 million from Paramount Pictures Corp. for alleged breach of contract.

11 Persons Shot Dead, Man Held

HAMILTON, Ohio (AP) — Eleven persons, including seven children, were shot to death in a two-story house here, police said Sunday night.

Police said they had taken one man into custody for questioning.

The bodies of seven children, three women and a man were found Sunday in the house on the south side of Hamilton, about 30 miles north of Cincinnati, police said.

All had been shot in the head except for a woman shot in the chest, police said.

The coroner indicated there was no sign of a struggle in the house occupied by a woman identified as Charity Ruppert, whom neighbors said was in her 60s and lived alone.

Three pistols were found in the living room of the home and a rifle was found leaning against a refrigerator in the kitchen. Spent shells were found in both rooms, police said.

Police declined to speculate on the nature of the shootings.

Police Chief George McNally termed the scene "a bloody mess."

Dynamite Trap In Car Kills Crime Figure

Cleveland (UPI) — Police said Sunday it appeared as many of 10 sticks of dynamite were in the booby trap that killed underworld figure Alex (Shondor) Birns when he tried to start his car.

A number of detectives said they feared another gang war might erupt over Birns' death, either for control of his numbers empire or for revenge.

"He was the last of the white guys who headed the rackets here and whoever had him wasted had it done by a professional," a police officer said. "This definitely cost somebody a lot of dough — at least $20,000 — to get rid of Shondor. But I'm surprised he lasted this long."

Birns, a mean street fighter with a penchant for flashy clothes and lovely women, was killed when his luxury car exploded seconds after he got inside.

Maxey Suggests Workshops Held To Boost Input

Jo Ann Maxey, Lincoln School Board candidate, suggested Sunday the board sponsor workshops on community issues to increase parent and student input into the school system.

Workshops on issues including drugs, sex education, curriculum planning and school counseling would demonstrate a concern "for the students who are not being reached by current programs," she said.

"School concerns are community concerns," she said, "and just as it is important to have citizen involvement in city planning, greater community involvement in educational goals will help the school board meet the needs of all students."

Death Of Man, 64, Said Suicide

A Mead man died at Bryan Memorial Hospital Sunday morning of an apparently self-inflicted gunshot wound, according to police reports.

Police said Charles Gustafson, 64, shot himself with a .22 caliber rifle while visiting his son at 5231 S. 51st.

UCLA's Wooden To Get Retirement Present?

SAN DIEGO (AP) — UCLA's Bruins battle Monday night to give Coach John Wooden a 10th NCAA basketball championship as a retirement present.

Their game against the physically strong Kentucky Wildcats still rates as a toss-up with some oddsmakers seeing UCLA as a one-point favorite in the contest at the San Diego Sports Arena.

Coach Joe B. Hall, who succeeded the legendary Adolph Rupp at Kentucky three years ago, now faces a team bidding farewell to another basketball legend.

Hall, however, doesn't feel Wooden's announcement after his semifinal victory Saturday over Louisville will affect the southerners.

"We have great momentum psychologically right now and have had through the tournament," Hall declared. "Coach Wooden's retirement announcement will have no negative effect on our team. What it does to his team remains to be seen."

UCLA, rated No. 1 in The Associated Press poll, takes a 27-3 record into the finale against No. 2 Kentucky, 26-4.

Wooden says he didn't make his announcement to "hype our players. We want to win with a workmanlike job."

At the same time, he admitted the Bruins this season haven't met teams with the physical strength of the Wildcats.

"We've played teams of similar style, but not as physically endowed," was the way the 64-year-old coach made his evaluation.

Wooden and Hall agree on one thing—this game will be for the national title, despite the comment of Coach Bobby Knight of Indiana that it should be only for the tournament championship. Knight's previously unbeaten Hoosiers lost by two points, 92-90, to Kentucky in regional competition.

Monday's program opens with a consolation game between Syracuse and Louisville. Kentucky whipped Syracuse 95-79 while Louisville fell in overtime to the Bruins 75-74.

Another capacity crowd of 15,151 will watch, along with millions viewing via national television.

Kentucky starts a front line of 6-10 freshman Rick Robey and seniors Kevin Grevey, 6-5, and Bob Gruyette, 6-9. Capt. Jimmy Dan Conner directs the action, teaming with another senior guard, Mike Flynn.

UCLA also has plenty of height up front with All-American Dave Meyers, 6-8; Marques Johnson, 6-6, and Rich Washington, 6-9. The No. 1 reserve, Ralph Drollinger, stands 7-1.

In the backcourt are Pete Trgovich, a senior, and Andre McCarter, a junior.

Kentucky's bench strength could make a big difference. Hall used 11 men in the his win over Syracuse, when reserves scored 24 of the 44 points. Jack Givens, a freshman, wound up as the Wildcats' leading scorer with 24.

"I thought maybe he didn't start his regulars," Wooden said with a smile. Then he added: "I was extremely impressed with Kentucky, the size and strength."

"I don't know when I've looked at a more awesome physical group of basketball players." The UCLA coach said Meyers' injured leg hurt after the Louisville game "and we don't know how it will react."

Even Rupp, the 73-year-old who coached four national championship teams at Kentucky, rates this the best one he's seen.

But Hall was about equally impressed with UCLA, saying: "It's a great team with a disciplined defense and true soundness in the game of basketball. Their coach is one of the finest I've had the privilege of knowing."

"No way we can come up with something of the impact of a resignation. But it's the last game for our six seniors and that has its own impact."

In answer to a question Sunday, Hall said the Syracuse press worked while Kentucky had reserves in the game but not against veterans.

UCLA long has been noted for its defensive press, but Hall said he will take his chances in substituting.

"We'll sacrifice a little bit to keep freshness in the game," he explained. "When we see the aggressiveness fade in the starters, we'll use substitutes to maintain the aggressiveness."

Both coaches declared they'd go with their usual starting lineups. Wooden explaining, "They're the ones that brought us here."

His UCLA clubs had won seven straight NCAA titles before losing to eventual winner North Carolina State in last year's semifinals. This time North Carolina State didn't make it to the final round of four.

Coach Roy Danforth of Syracuse provided a little indication of what UCLA will face. His team was quicker than Kentucky, but he commented, "Physically, we just couldn't play with Kentucky. It's hard to be quick when you've got a guy 210 pounds hanging on your arm. My first five outscored Kentucky's first five by 10 points, but they had the bench."

Danforth added, "From my point of view, I'd like to see Kentucky win. When anybody beats us, I'd like to see them go all the way."

Coach Denny Crum was put in an untenable position with a similar question, his Louisville team also being from Kentucky. And he is a former UCLA player and assistant to Wooden.

So he answered, "I don't think there is any honest way I can answer that question and come out ahead."

Same Story For Huskers

Lawrence, Kan. — Sunday's scheduled Big Eight baseball doubleheader between Kansas and Nebraska was canceled because of wet grounds.

The entire three-game series between NU and KU was halted by bad weather. It was to have been Nebraska's Big Eight opener.

The Huskers, with a 2-8 record are scheduled to host Morningside College of Sioux City, Ia., in a Tuesday doubleheader at 1:30 p.m. at the NU Diamond, weather permitting. It will be NU's home opener.

Better Record

Is rough riding a problem at Nebraska horse races?

Apparently not, judging by the few disqualifications each year at Nebraska tracks. That doesn't mean, however, that the three-man board of stewards has been lax in efforts to "police" the sport.

In fact, through the first 19 days of the Fonner Park meet in Grand Island, only three horses have been disqualified. That's from a total of 171 races.

While three in the first 19 days is not an unusually high number of disqualifications, it certainly is a change from past years where the numbers were never reversed. During last year's Ak-Sar-Ben meeting in Omaha (a total of 55 days), three numbers weren't taken down during the entire meet.

That situation was given a thorough hearing at last fall's annual two-day Nebraska State Racing Commission meeting in Omaha. Commission chairman Harry Franham stressed the need for more stewards' inquiries, especially in races where something questionable occurred.

'Just Careless'

In commenting on the current situation, Fonner Park steward Irv Anderson, once a standout rider for the famed Calumet Farms, noted that rough riding has never been a problem in Nebraska.

"We've never had trouble with rough riding... just careless riding," he said. "With the one case last week (when jockey Wayne Deatherage was handed a 10-day penalty for rough riding after his mount, Aconight, was disqualified from first to second in the third race on March 22) that was the first rough riding we've had in a long time."

"In fact, we could have placed the horse last for that incident," he said. "That's one of the severest penalties we've had in a long time for riding."

Inquiries and letting the public know that rough riding will not be tolerated should be the policy of the board of stewards at each Nebraska track. We hope the actions of the Grand Island stewards will be duplicated at Ak-Sar-Ben, Lincoln, Columbus and Atokad.

Going from one commendable situation to a deplorable one:

Joe Ramsey, who recently resigned as head basketball coach at the University of Oklahoma after a two-year stint, was one of the youngest and most progressive coaches in major college basketball.

Unfortunately, Sooner backers couldn't understand why the OU basketball team didn't produce a national championship team such as the Sooner football squad. Reminds you of another Big Eight Conference school, doesn't it?

Ramsey was only given a mere two years to accomplish a task which occasionally takes a decade. His forced resignation has to downgrade Oklahoma, in specific, and Big Eight basketball in general.

It's a sad commentary when fans are unable to look at the total athletic picture and clamor to replace a coach, who just two years ago won 18 of 26 games.

OU has an all-Big Eight performer in 6-9 junior center Alvan Adams and little else. Forward Bob Pritchard was either injured or way below form this season and that made a big difference in the OU picture.

Big Eight teams need more than one all-conference player to make a serious title challenge. Unfortunately, Oklahoma only had one standout, but eliminating Joe Ramsey won't solve that problem.

Nebraska fans, are you listening???

'Great Career' To End Late Tonight

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — John Wooden, the architect of the greatest dynasty in college basketball history, will end his brilliant 27-year UCLA coaching career Monday when his Bruins battle Kentucky in the finals of the 37th annual NCAA tournament.

Wooden, 64, revealed his decision Saturday after UCLA shaded Louisville 75-74 in overtime to join the Wildcats in the championship game.

"It's been a great career," the famed Wizard of Westwood said. "There have been many joys and many pleasures."

Wooden's record probably will never be equalled. Since 1964, UCLA has won nine NCAA championships. His Bruins can make that 10 titles in a dozen years by beating Kentucky.

"I leave UCLA with no regrets," said the only man ever to be inducted into the National Basketball Hall of Fame as a player and coach.

"I think I've made the right decision for myself and for my family. They are the two most important things in the world to me."

J.D. Morgan, UCLA's athletic director, will decide on Wooden's successor and would only say, "I am looking for the best man available."

Morgan would not say when he is expected to make his choice known, but it figures to be shortly because high school athletes can begin signing national letters of intent April 9.

Wooden's successor may turn out to be Denny Crum, a former Wooden player who left as the Bruin coaches' No. 1 assistant four years ago to take the Louisville job. The 37-year-old Crum would not rule himself out of accepting the UCLA post after Wooden's announcement although he is completing only his first year of a five-year contract.

Although Wooden never said it publicly, it was believed he was grooming Gary Cunningham, a former UCLA player and his No. 1 assistant after Crum left, to take over after he retired. But Cunningham, 35, who has his doctorate in educational administration, revealed immediately after Wooden's announcement, that he planned to leave coaching and seek an educational or athletic administration job.

"There are a number of things that went into my decision that I don't wish to discuss," said Wooden who could have stayed at UCLA until he was 68.

"There was no single factor. It was a lot of things. I just felt it was a good time now. It's something I've been pondering for a few weeks."

"The outcome of this tournament had nothing to do with it. It suddenly struck me to do it now rather than wait for the outcome and have some people say 'well, he won it and got out' or 'well, he lost it and got out.'"

Wooden's health may have been one of the reasons. He told reporters Friday night that he had been having trouble sleeping in recent weeks.

He experienced heart trouble two years ago and has been taking daily five mile walks at a brisk pace at the request of his doctor.

Asked about his successor, Wooden said "I'll not comment on that. That's not my decision."

But the coach who guided the Bruins to four perfect 30-0 seasons, pointed out that UCLA will lose only two seniors, Dave Meyers and Pete Trgovich. Both are starters.

"I said when I retired that I wanted to leave a better than average team for my successor," he said. "I didn't want to leave the cupboard bare and make it tough on him."

"I definitely don't think it's going to be tough on my successor. He'll have a good nucleus to work with."

Corrected Flaw Helps Nicklaus Win

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (UPI) — Jack Nicklaus said if he hadn't discovered and corrected a flaw in his swing Sunday he probably would not have won the Heritage Golf Classic.

But Nicklaus discovered and corrected the flaw in time to come charging down the final nine and beat challenging Tom Weiskopf by three strokes.

"I had been swinging too loose and placing the ball too far right," said Nicklaus, who had seen a commanding six-stroke lead completely disappear in Saturday's third round.

"Once I realized what I was doing wrong, I went back to shooting right at the flag."

The rain-dampened Heritage triumph was Nicklaus' second victory in his last two tournament appearances as he tuned up for the Masters two weeks from now and a bid for an unprecedented 15th major championship.

"This course doesn't really prepare you for the Masters," said Nicklaus. "The course there is much wider open."

"But, anytime I win, I'm satisfied with my game. I'll go to Augusta next Wednesday and practice for about four days, then take the weekend off."

"I feel my play on the final nine was as good as it was the first two days but the conditions were different and it's hard to really compare."

Tied with his former Ohio State teammate midway through the final round of this $200,000 event, Nicklaus played aggressive golf over the closing holes to win by three strokes with a 13-under-par 271, shooting a three-under-par 68 Sunday.

Nicklaus, who won $40,000 here to push his earnings for this year to more than $109,000 in just six tournaments, had held a commanding six-stroke lead midway through the tournament after posting a record-setting 63 Friday on the Harbortown course he helped design back in the mid '60s.

But Weiskopf, a freshman at Ohio State the year the Golden Bear was a senior at that school, caught him in the third round Saturday when he shot a 68 and Nicklaus a 74, and stayed with Nicklaus until the 11th hole Sunday when Jack went under par for the first time in the round with the first of three birdies in a seven-hole span. Weiskopf had a 71 Sunday to wind up at 10-under-par 274, good for $22,800 in second-place money, only $400 less than his total previous earnings this year.

Nicklaus will skip this coming week's tournament at Greensboro, N.C., to go to Augusta, Ga., and get in some early practice in his bid to become the first man to win that prestigious tournament five times.

The victory was the 55th on the PGA tour for the 35-year-old Nicklaus in less than 14 years and raised his record career earnings to more than $2,370,000. The 271 he posted for 72 holes on the Oceanside course on this off-coast South Carolina island was one stroke lower than the previous tournament record set by U.S. Open champ Hale Irwin when he won here for the second time two years ago.

Irwin wound up at even par 284 this time around. Defending champion Johnny Miller, the only man to win more money than Nicklaus so far this year and all of last year, didn't make the cut, shooting 78-73 to go nine over par for the two rounds he lasted.

"I corrected my swing after the first nine holes and played the back nine real well," Nicklaus said at the awards ceremony. In addition to the $40,000, the wealthy Nicklaus also won $8,000 worth of furniture for being closer than any other golfer in his approach shot to the 17th hole Sunday.

Charles Coody jumped all the way from a tie for 14th to third place Sunday by turning in the day's best score, a six-under-par 65. That gave Coody, a former Masters champ, a five-under 279 for the tournament and $14,200.

John Mahaffey, shooting one-under 70 all four days, took fourth place at 280 and Bruce Crampton and Tom Kite, who didn't get out of the 60s until his final-round 75, were at 281. B.R. McLendon was at 282 and John Schlee completed the list of only eight golfers who were under par for the full four rounds at 283.

Sunday's nationally televised round was played under heavy overcast skies with occasional light rain. There had been a forecast of thundershowers in the early afternoon, but that didn't materialize. The early finishers were bothered by a tricky wind that made club selection difficult, just as it did most of the first three days.

South African Gary Player, playing in his first tournament in the United States in six months and in his first tournament anywhere in two months, had a 74 Sunday for a one-over 285. That was the same total posted by Iee Trevino who shot an even par 71 in the final round.

Arnold Palmer finally got his game going Sunday, turning in a three-under 68, but his weak play the previous three days left him at four-over 288 for the tournament.

"In a way I'm happy about the way I played, but I'm discouraged too," said the 32-year-old Weiskopf who has not won a tournament now in 20 months. "I putted well at times and other times I didn't."

Weiskopf, who played even par golf Sunday, last won in the 1973 Canadian Open. He had figured after Nicklaus took that six-stroke lead on Friday that he had no chance here this week. But after catching Nicklaus Saturday, he said, "Now, it's a whole new tournament."

Nicklaus fell a stroke behind Weiskopf Sunday when he bogeyed the fourth hole and was two behind when Weiskopf birdied No. 5. But Jack got one of those strokes back with a birdie at No. 6 and caught up when Weiskopf bogeyed No. 8.

UCLA's Wooden To Get Retirement Present?

SAN DIEGO (AP) — UCLA's Bruins battle Monday night to give Coach John Wooden a 10th NCAA basketball championship as a retirement present.

Their game against the physically strong Kentucky Wildcats still rates as a toss-up with some oddsmakers seeing UCLA as a one-point favorite in the contest at the San Diego Sports Arena.

Coach Joe B. Hall, who succeeded the legendary Adolph Rupp at Kentucky three years ago, now faces a team bidding farewell to another basketball legend.

Hall, however, doesn't feel Wooden's announcement after his semifinal victory Saturday over Louisville will affect the southerners.

"We have great momentum psychologically right now and have had through the tournament," Hall declared. "Coach Wooden's retirement announcement will have no negative effect on our team. What it does to his team remains to be seen."

UCLA, rated No. 1 in The Associated Press poll, takes a 27-3 record into the finale against No. 2 Kentucky, 26-4.

Wooden says he didn't make his announcement to "hype our players. We want to win with a workmanlike job."

At the same time, he admitted the Bruins this season haven't met teams with the physical strength of the Wildcats.

"We've played teams of similar style, but not as physically endowed," was the way the 64-year-old coach made his evaluation.

Wooden and Hall agree on one thing—this game will be for the national title, despite the comment of Coach Bobby Knight of Indiana that it should be only for the tournament championship. Knight's previously unbeaten Hoosiers lost by two points, 92-90, to Kentucky in regional competition.

Monday's program opens with a consolation game between Syracuse and Louisville. Kentucky whipped Syracuse 85-79 while Louisville fell in overtime to the Bruins 75-74.

Another capacity crowd of 15,151 will watch, along with millions viewing via national television.

Kentucky starts a front line of 6-10 freshman Rick Robey and seniors Kevin Grevey, 6-5, and Bob Gruyette, 6-9. Capt. Jimmy Dan Conner directs the action, teaming with another senior guard, Mike Flynn.

UCLA also has plenty of height up front with All-American Dave Meyers, 6-8; Marques Johnson, 6-6, and Rich Washington, 6-9. The No. 1 reserve, Ralph Drollinger, stands 7-1.

In the backcourt are Pete Trgovich, a senior, and Andre McCarter, a junior.

Kentucky's bench strength could make a big difference. Hall used 11 men in the his win over Syracuse, when reserves scored 24 of the 44 points. Jack Givens, a freshman, wound up as the Wildcats' leading scorer with 24.

"I thought maybe he didn't start his regulars," Wooden said with a smile. Then he added: "I was extremely impressed with Kentucky, the size and strength."

"I don't know when I've looked at a more awesome physical group of basketball players." The UCLA coach said Meyers' injured leg hurt after the Louisville game "and we don't know how it will react."

Even Rupp, the 73-year-old who coached four national championship teams at Kentucky, rates this the best one he's seen.

But Hall was about equally impressed with UCLA, saying: "It's a great team with a disciplined defense and true soundness in the game of basketball. Their coach is one of the finest I've had the privilege of knowing."

"No way we can come up with something of the impact of a resignation. But it's the last game for our six seniors and that has its own impact."

In answer to a question Sunday, Hall said the Syracuse press worked while Kentucky had reserves in the game but not against veterans.

UCLA long has been noted for its defensive press, but Hall said he will take his chances in substituting.

"We'll sacrifice a little bit to keep freshness in the game," he explained. "When we see the aggressiveness fade in the starters, we'll use substitutes to maintain the aggressiveness."

Both coaches declared they'd go with their usual starting lineups. Wooden explaining, "They're the ones that brought us here."

His UCLA clubs had won seven straight NCAA titles before losing to eventual winner North Carolina State in last year's semifinals. This time North Carolina State didn't make it to the final round of four.

Coach Roy Danforth of Syracuse provided a little indication of what UCLA will face. His team was quicker than Kentucky, but he commented, "Physically, we just couldn't play with Kentucky. It's hard to be quick when you've got a guy 210 pounds hanging on your arm. My first five outsourced Kentucky's first five by 10 points, but they had the bench."

Danforth added, "From my point of view, I'd like to see Kentucky win. When anybody beats us, I'd like to see them go all the way."

Coach Denny Crum was put in an untenable position with a similar question, his Louisville team also being from Kentucky. And he is a former UCLA player and assistant to Wooden.

So he answered, "I don't think there is any honest way I can answer that question and come out ahead."

Better Record

Is rough riding a problem at Nebraska horse races?

Apparently not, judging by the few disqualifications each year at Nebraska tracks. That doesn't mean, however, that the three-man board of stewards has been lax in efforts to "police" the sport.

In fact, through the first 19 days of the Fonner Park meet in Grand Island, only three horses have been disqualified. That's from a total of 171 races.

While three in the first 19 days is not an unusually high number of disqualifications, it certainly is a change from past years where the numbers were never reversed. During last year's Ak-Sar-Ben meeting in Omaha (a total of 55 days), three numbers weren't taken down during the entire meet.

That situation was given a thorough hearing at last fall's annual two-day Nebraska State Racing Commission meeting in Omaha. Commission chairman Harry Franham stressed the need for more stewards' inquiries, especially in races where something questionable occurred.

'Just Careless'

In commenting on the current situation, Fonner Park steward Irv Anderson, once a standout rider for the famed Calumet Farms, noted that rough riding has never been a problem in Nebraska.

"We've never had trouble with rough riding... just careless riding," he said. "With the one case last week (when jockey Wayne Deatherage was handed a 10-day penalty for rough riding after his mount, Aconight, was disqualified from first to second in the third race on March 22) that was the first rough riding we've had in a long time."

"In fact, we could have placed the horse last for that incident," he said. "That's one of the severest penalties we've had in a long time for riding."

Inquiries and letting the public know that rough riding will not be tolerated should be the policy of the board of stewards at each Nebraska track. We hope the actions of the Grand Island stewards will be duplicated at Ak-Sar-Ben, Lincoln, Columbus and Atokad.

Going from one commendable situation to a deplorable one:

Joe Ramsey, who recently resigned as head basketball coach at the University of Oklahoma after a two-year stint, was one of the youngest and most progressive coaches in major college basketball.

Unfortunately, Sooner backers couldn't understand why the OU basketball team didn't produce a national championship team such as the Sooner football squad. Reminds you of another Big Eight Conference school, doesn't it?

Ramsey was only given a mere two years to accomplish a task which occasionally takes a decade. His forced resignation has to downgrade Oklahoma, in specific, and Big Eight basketball in general.

It's a sad commentary when fans are unable to look at the total athletic picture and clamor to replace a coach, who just two years ago won 18 of 26 games.

OU has an all-Big Eight performer in 6-9 junior center Alvan Adams and little else. Forward Bob Pritchard was either injured or way below form this season and that made a big difference in the OU picture.

Big Eight teams need more than one all-conference player to make a serious title challenge. Unfortunately, Oklahoma only had one standout, but eliminating Joe Ramsey won't solve that problem.

Nebraska fans, are you listening???

These latest results represent a slight drop of public confidence in Congress from July 1974, when the House and Senate enjoyed a slightly higher rating than previously during the impeachment hearings and before the fall elections. Most likely, Americans are doubly disappointed in the performance of this primarily Democratic Congress because they gave the Democrats an overwhelming 61-39% vote in last November's elections.

When viewed together with President Ford's low overall ratings, these latest results indicate the people's marked lack of confidence in the present administration. This lack of confidence seems to have been triggered by the government's handling of the recession and inflation, and could simply aggravate the country's economic problems.

While nature makes up its mind whether to grow my herbs or drown them, we looked in on Alimony Row at Perry's grog shop on swiny Union street.

Last year 75,000 American husbands stepped out of the scatter. "I'm just going down to the delicatessen for a ham sandwich, dear." They didn't come back.

Grand Jury Charges Ex-Omahan

Omaha (AP) — A federal grand jury has returned an indictment charging a Tucson, Ariz., man with attempted income tax evasion for 1968.

The indictment was returned against Fred Knez, who lived in Omaha before moving to Arizona in 1970. While in Omaha, he was district manager of Peter Kiewit Sons' Inc.

U.S. Atty. William Schaphorst said Knez reported taxable income in 1968 of $22,779.39 and paid taxes of $5,664.

An investigation by the Internal Revenue Service, Schaphorst said, showed the Knez should have reported taxable income of $37,604.39 and paid taxes of $10,102.

Schaphorst said Knez allegedly failed to report $14,825 in dividends, interest and capital gains on the sale of stock.

Venezuela Visit Set

Grand Jury Charges Ex-Omahan

Omaha (AP) — A federal grand jury has returned an indictment charging a Tucson, Ariz., man with attempted income tax evasion for 1968.

The indictment was returned against Fred Knez, who lived in Omaha before moving to Arizona in 1970. While in Omaha, he was district manager of Peter Kiewit Sons' Inc.

U.S. Atty. William Schaphorst said Knez reported taxable income in 1968 of $22,779.39 and paid taxes of $5,664.

An investigation by the Internal Revenue Service, Schaphorst said, showed the Knez should have reported taxable income of $37,604.39 and paid taxes of $10,102.

Schaphorst said Knez allegedly failed to report $14,825 in dividends, interest and capital gains on the sale of stock.

MONTGOMERY WARD SUPER AUTOMOTIVE VALUES

Steel Radial Whitewalls. $12-$22 off.

• Steel-radial construction • 4 rayon belts, 1 steel belt • Radial cord ply body

PASSENGER CAR TIRE GUARANTEE
Montgomery Ward guarantees each of its passenger car tires for a specified number of miles when used on passenger cars or station wagons, except taxis. If your tire does not give you this mileage because of:
• defects in material or workmanship,
• normal road hazard failure,
• premature tread wearout (2/32 inches or less remaining),
Montgomery Ward will:
1. During the first 10% of guaranteed mileage, replace the tire free.
2. During the remaining guaranteed mileage, replace it for a pro rata charge based on mileage used.
Nail punctures repaired free during the entire guaranteed mileage.
For guarantee service and adjustments, return tire to any Montgomery Ward branch with the Guarantee Booklet issued at the time of sale.
Charge after first 10% of guaranteed mileage based on selling price in effect at the time of return at branch to which returned, including federal excise tax.
Passenger tires used on taxicabs, and motor vehicles other than passenger cars are guaranteed on the same basis against defects in materials and workmanship only.

A Full Disclosure AD

Tired of bouncing around?

The oldest career educational company is seeking experienced direct salesmen and/or sales women and sales managers, who are willing to work and who want to grow with us. We are interested in talking to people who want to move up to sales management positions when qualified.

If you do not have direct sales experience and feel you can sell, I can help you. I will give you that opportunity - just read our philosophy (maybe that's how we got so big). We don't promise the moon. If you have the ability and are willing to work hard, you will make money with us. As a part of the ICS sales team, you will be supplied with qualified inquiries from
